DAILY EDITION Wednesday, Nov. 11, 1925.

We Are Just What We Think.

If we think success, we shall succeed. If we think failure, then failure looms ahead of us like a dark abyss that is bound to overwhelm us. If we think joy we become joyful and life is pleasant for ourselves and our friends. If we think sadness and dwell on that which is sad, then sadness will be our lot, few our friends, and woe to those who cleave to us, for their path shall be saddened with the gloom of our companionship.

If we think evil, then evil will be ours as sure as night follows day. There is no escape. The mind is in control. It may not be the impelling force but it is the guiding force. It is the instrument through which our destinies are shaped.

What Will Happen In Parliament.

Many people are still speculating as to what is likely to happen in Parliament when it convenes. Nobody knows. Yet we can all guess. Our guess is that Mackenzie King's Government will be sustained and that it will carry on for a year or two. We may be wrong, of course, because this is only a guess.

If all the independent groups line up with the Government they will have a majority of eleven over the Conservatives. Give the Conservatives two of the independents, eliminate Bagot, take out the speaker who has to be elected and still the Government has a majority of five over all. With that majority they can carry on. It looks reasonable that the men who were elected to carry out a similar policy should work together in order to prevent another group with another policy controlling the Government.

In discussing this thre is no intention to re-introduce political controversy. The election is over and we hope there will not be another for some time to come. The convening of Parliament and the fate of the Government is something that we can now look at from an ex parte point of view. We are all spectators. We have cast our votes and can sit back and look at the result and talk over the possibilities.

Drunk Loving Cup With German Ambassador.

Austin Chamberlain, one of the most prominent members of the British Government during a banquet at the Guildhall, London, drank from the same loving cup with the German ambassador and referring to this Mr. Chamberlain expressed the wish that the people of Germany and Britain would also forget the war.

The Guildhall banquet is an annual event of greatest importance in British public life. The custom has grown up for prominent statesmen to make important public announcements on that occasion. Policies are outlined or pronouncements made. The policy of the British Government, it would seem then, is to be one of conciliation and friendship toward Germany.

Disturbing Force In The Dominion.

The Ku Klux Klan, if allowed to proceed with organization, promises to become a disturbing force in Canadian life, whereas what is needed just now is a welding force that will bring together the different factions, nationalities and groups and make them one. We shall be sorry to see the Canadian people broken up into factions and the Klan has been a strong factor in bringing about such a condition wherever it has operated.

TAX REVISION CONTROVERSY

Coolidge Administration Trying to Lift Burdens from Wealthy and Place on Poor

SENATE FIGHT COMING

Democrats and Progressive Republicans Likely Thwart Republican Move in House

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—The tax revision controversy, which has begun before the House Committee on Ways and Means, and which will continue for most of the winter, is already beginning to take on important political aspects. Before it is finished, it promises to arouse a great political controversy which may have a bearing on the campaign in 1926 for the control of Congress. It may reach into the next presidential campaign in 1928.

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon has put forth a plan for the revision of the existing tax law which provides chiefly for the reduction of the surtaxes on large incomes and the repeal of the estate tax and inheritance tax. It has other features and comprehends considerable reductions in the income taxes imposed on the small taxpayers. What are known as the normal income tax rate would be reduced as well as the surtaxes. The plan of Secretary Mellon would lop off about $300,000,000 from the present tax burden of the country.

Relieving Capital

But while Mr. Mellon would cut taxes all along the line, the avowed purpose of his plan is primarily to relieve capital and wealth of much of its present tax burden. His argument is that the public would thus be benefitted by relieving capital of burdens which now tend to hamper it and prevent it from engaging freely in industry.

President Coolidge is backing the Mellon proposals and the "Old Guard" republicans in Congress are likewise backing them.

On the other hand, the democrats and progressive republicans are already tending to combine to fight the Mellon program. They are calling for reductions which would total more than $300,000,000 and which would, first of all, relieve the small taxpayers. They are willing to make some reductions in the surtaxes but not as much as under the Mellon program. As for the estate taxes, the democrats and progressives, with some exceptions, strongly oppose repeal. They maintain the Mellon program is part of a program, whose purpose is to bring about, inside of a few years, vast transfer of taxes from wealth to the banks of the people of small and moderate means.

Agricultural Elements

To a considerable extent, the agricultural elements of the country are lining up against the Mellon program. Already, the American Farm Bureau Federation is out openly against repeal of the estate tax on the ground that to repeal it would mean the farmers would have to pay more taxes.

The House will probably pass the tax bill about as Mellon and the administration want it passed. But not so the Senate. It is probable that combination of democrats and progressive republicans in the Senate will defeat the Mellon program and to a large extent shape the tax measures to suit themselves. They will not only assail the Mellon plan as the plan of "big business" but they will strike at the Coolidge administration on the ground that its voice is the voice, not of the masses of the people, but of the classes.

ARMENIAN RELIEF FUND OPENED HERE

City Council Authorizes City Treasurer to Take Subscriptions for European Orphans

The city council decided last night to open a subscription list in the city treasurer's office for the Armenian Relief Fund. The matter came up in the form of a report from the finance committee recommending that a straight grant of $100 be made by the council instead of permitting a subscription campaign to be carried out in the city. Such a precedent was not approved of by Ald. Stephens and Ald. Casey who felt that the council had no authority to vote the people's money in this manner. After some further discussion, it was decided to open the subscription list for voluntary contributions.

LIBRARY BOARD HOLDS SESSION

New Regulation in Regard to Fines is Adopted; Not Enough Books on Shelves

The Library Board had a long session last evening with all the members present except Alderman Smith who was at the city council meeting. A number of small matters were dealt with connected with the administration of the institution. Miss Cruikshank, the librarian, had a number of suggestions to make and particularly urged that more books were needed as the old ones were wearing out fast.

In her report the librarian stated that 2,859 books had been issued during October which was an average of 105.8 a day. There had been 42 new registrations, 11 of which were juvenile. Eleven borrowers had cancelled their membership leaving 2,022 now on the list.

During the month four books had been added by gift and 44 by purchase while 4 had been cancelled leaving now on the shelves or in circulation 4,527 volumes. A number of these are in bad condition and some will be sent away at once to be rebound.

A new regulation was passed by the board in regard to fines. It was decided to levy two cents a day for the first five days overdue and one cent a day afterwards. No renewals will be allowed on new fiction as there is always a long waiting list for that class of literature.
