QUADRA TO BE DRY BOAT NOW

Well Known Vessel to be Taken in U.S. Dry Navy

VICTORIA, July 24. — The steamer Quadra will shortly enter upon another adventurous phase of its picturesque career. Few vessels in the North Pacific can boast of such a long, active and tangled history as this staunch little 400-ton boat, yet now she seems destined to attain another important period of service.

When the Quadra was launched in 1891 she served a short time in Atlantic waters and was then turned over to the Canadian government to be used in fisheries patrol work off the British Columbia coast. In the war against the poachers she became more famous than the illustrious Spanish admiral after whom she was named because of his association with the early exploration of this coast.

When the war broke out the Quadra was an old vessel, but she was commissioned for special war service and aided Canadian cruisers in the capture of the schooners Oregon and Leonor said to be operated by Germans in a gun-running exploit off the Mexican coast. Later on, when the Canadian government decided to use faster and more modern vessels for fisheries patrol work, the Quadra was ordered sold and she eventually became the property of liquor exporters engaged in running cargoes out of British Columbia ports for points in Mexico. Much of this liquor, according to court evidence, was never delivered to Mexico but was shipped into California while the Quadra was at anchor outside the twelve mile limit.

When the Quadra ventured too close to the Farallone Islands one day last summer United States rum chasers effected her capture. Litigation resulted and it was finally decided that the vessel should remain a prize of the United States government.

Following a decision in Federal court that automobiles confiscated from rum-runners may be used by prohibition agents, officials in San Francisco began taking steps to use the Quadra and other rum ships seized in their dry navy. The Quadra is regarded as particularly well suited for that sort of work.

MONTREAL WORRIED BY ITS MOSQUITOES

City Authorities and C.N.R. Co-operating to Eradicate Dangerous Pests

MONTREAL, July 24.—Complaints are again being made regarding the mosquito evil in the lower levels of Notre Dame de Grace ward.

Coupled with flies, gnats and other species of irritants which have their headquarters in the swamps, the fear is expressed that, being carriers of disease germs, they may be productive of an epidemic of some sort.

City authorities and the Canadian National Railway are co-operating to eliminate the mosquitoes. Some people think they come from the River Ste. Pierre, which has been a source of annoyance for some years owing to the fact that the city of Montreal uses it for sewage purposes. Protest after protest has been filed by Alderman Angrignon of St. Paul ward and Provincial authorities have ordered the city to improve the sewage in this section of the city. Very many houses still boast ancient facilities.

CANCER VACCINATION IS NEW POSSIBILITY

This May be Result of Experiments Conducted by London Doctor

LONDON, July 24. — Vaccination against cancer may become possible following further experiments by Dr. W. E. Gye, who recently announced the segregation of the cancer germ.

Dr. Gye, who, according to reports, has made a vaccine from the cancer virus, is now attempting to innoculate animals to make them immune against the disease. If the experiments are successful, it is understood that, although the treatment will not be a cure, it will be a preventive and immunity can be obtained as from the danger of smallpox and other maladies.

It is declared that the innoculation of mice has resulted in the rodents' immunity.

It is also reported that Dr. Gye and Dr. J. E. Barnard have seen and photographed smallpox germs.

"TONGUES OF FLAME"

The "Good Luck" star as the lovable fighting hero of Peter Clark Macfarlane's powerful novel burns up the screen with action. The story of how an "easy mark," his name unjustly blackened, becomes hard-boiled and makes it clean. The drama of an innocent man sent to jail, and of how he won back his good name and a girl. Everybody's favorite as "Hell Fire" Harrington, a returned soldier who finds more thrills and excitement on his own Main Street than he did on all the battle grounds of France. A photo-play of pleasing romance. Spectacular fire scenes and mob episodes. Strong supporting cast.

Thomas Meighan, Bessie Love, Burton Churchill, John Miltern Cyril Ring, Eileen Percy and many others.
