Stork Gave Account Of His Stewardship.

People who attended the meeting at the Empress Theatre last night at which Fred Stork was the principal speaker, were much pleased at the frank manner in which the member gave an account of his stewardship. He took the people into his confidence in a great many matters which must have opened their eyes and given them a new slant on political life. His exposition of the system of letter writing was certainly illuminating.

Mr. Stork, while telling some of the things he had done, did not take undue credit to himself in connection with any of the matters discussed. What he did show, although he did not so state it, was that there are dozens of sections of this constituency which had to receive attention as well as Prince Rupert and that in a great many of them wharves or post offices or other improvements had been secured. Looking after these was a part of his work as well as looking after the interests of Prince Rupert.

If Not Stork Then Who Got Elevator?

The question was asked at the meeting last night "If Stork did not get the elevator who did?" Did the Conservatives get it? Did the Progressives get it? Mr. Stork showed that Robert Forke had not only not helped but had criticized it. He also showed what a critical time there was when the estimates were being considered and how nearly the elevator vote escaped being thrown out as a result of the onslaughts of the enemy, Conservative and Progressive.

Good Thing To Have Purpose In Life.

It is a good thing to have a purpose in life. The person who lives just from day to day without any idea of doing anything greater or better than is being done today, is not in line with evolution. Such a life does not help the race to get anywhere.

The brain is developed just as the muscles are developed, by use. The person who exercises the mind will grow in mental capacity. His cerebrum will enlarge and if he keeps on developing he will become a superman.

While only a few have the capacity to concentrate and the physical strength to carry on the development, everyone can do something. Everyone can have some aim greater than merely carrying on and gradually letting go at the end.

Making Business A Recreation.

To Europeans, business is a serious, steady grind, says the Vancouver Sun. When relaxation is necessary, the European business man takes to cards, to social conversation or to cultural pursuits.

With the American his work is his play. Business becomes a sport with him. He is obsessed with it. He gets into the habit of regarding everybody he meets, even casually, as a prospect.

It is a spirit that has inspired great movements in the past. It is the instinct that sent the Phoenicians to Cornwall for tin, that led Rome to destroy Carthage, that built the British merchant marine, the German cartels and the American economic organization of today.

It is the mainspring of industrialism, the basis of North America's civilization. But if the North American exhausts his capacities for play in his devotion to business, what instinct will ever drive him to culture?

That is the other side of the question.

Premier of Saskatchewan Claims Meighen Would Rob the Farmers of Fruits of Years of Struggle

REGINA, Sept. 30.—Hon. G. A. Dunning, premier of Saskatchewan, speaking on behalf of the Liberal Party of Canada charged that Hon. Arthur Meighen was trying to rob the farmers of the fruits of their long struggle by proposing to increase their taxes in the form of higher import tariffs on articles which they use. He declared it to be the most critical election since the opening up of the West.

Mr. Dunning is one of the leaders of Liberalism in the West and his taking part in the campaign is looked on here as a source of strength to the party. He said:

I would fail in my duty as a citizen and be unworthy of the confidence which the people of this province repose in me if I did not speak out plainly in connection with the great issue of the present Federal election, an issue which affects so intimately the welfare of every citizen and every family in this province. There are, of course, a number of issues but the outstanding one in relation to the welfare of our people is the proposal of the Conservative party if returned to power to bring about an all-round increase in the customs tariff.

Pure and Simple Tax
 I sometimes wonder if the people of this part of Canada have yet fully grasped what this proposal means to them. Whatever the tariff may mean to some sections of Canada, not even Mr. Meighen will question that to the people of Western Canada it is a tax pure and simple and is in fact the highest individual tax now borne by the people. Whether or not the tariff brings advantages to some other parts of Canada is debatable but it is beyond debate that no possible advantage can accrue from it to the people of the West.

The leader of the Tory party admits this when he offers a species of horse trade by way of alleged but very indefinite compensation in railway rates to the West and the Maritimes for the extra taxation involved in his tariff proposals. That form of compensation is so futile and impractical as to be unworthy of serious discussion and no one anywhere in Canada is discussing it as a serious proposition. The very man and party making the proposition have been opposed and are today opposing the measure of maximum freight rates for years guaranteed by statute to this part of Canada under the Crow's Nest Pass agreement.

Adverse Conditions
 For the past several years the people of this part of Canada have been struggling against adverse economic conditions. It is well known that the inflation consequent on war benefits last of all the primary producer and that after war deflation hits first and hardest the same individual. The producers and people generally of Western Canada have demonstrated courage and faith in their country during these dark days to an extraordinary degree. They have practised thrift and hard work in an endeavor to get their cost of production down to a point which would leave a margin of profit in the selling price of their product. They have embarked upon co-operative enterprises of a type and magnitude never before attained, all in order to solve their own economic problems.

I am not prepared to say that Western Canada is out of the woods and on the high road to prosperity but I can say that the efforts put forth by our people along these various lines are bearing fruit today in improved conditions throughout the West, in increased buying power on the part of the farmers—an increased buying power which, in my judgment, will do more to stimulate industry in other parts of Canada than any high protective tariff system yet devised.

Proposal to Rob
 Yes, we in the West can begin to see daylight and just at the time when the first rays appear, along comes Mr. Meighen and his party with a definite proposal to rob us of the fruits of our years of struggle by an all-round increase in that part of our taxation which at present bears most heavily upon us.

Western people, generally, recognize that Canada in spite of its great area is one country and, therefore, must have one fiscal system. Reconciling the varied economic interests of the various parts of Canada represents a real problem of statesmanship, the solution of which cannot possibly involve that any one section of Canada can have its own interests served regardless of the interests of the rest of the country. All parts of Canada must make concessions in order that all may share in the benefits of a united country. Many parts of Canada, especially the West and the Maritime provinces, are making to day under the present tariff very great sacrifices.

Critical Election
 To my mind this is the most critical election since the opening up of this part of Canada. It will soon be sixty years since final arrangements were made to create a nation in British North America extending from the Atlantic to the Pacific. After years of struggle and then only as a result of mutual concessions, Confederation was established upon the principle of unity in diversity, recognizing the diverse interests of the various parts of Canada, providing for them so far as possible by the establishment of provinces with wide powers of government. From that time forward the great problem of Canadian statesmanship has been to maintain unity in spite of divergence of interests.

To my mind the proposals of the Conservative party in this election tend to foster sectional division and disunity because they tend to force the less populous parts of Canada, more especially the Maritimes and the West—to make even greater concessions in the form of higher taxation than they are now doing—concessions which cannot be made without serious economic consequences to their people.

THE MAN IN THE MOON

says:
 Money talks, but when doing so it usually says "goodbye."

Here's to the lady hikers
 Who daily hit the ties
 They sure are some speed artists
 And I'm telling you no lies.

Jake says he heard of two young people getting lost the other day. What he is wondering is, were both of them lost?

I should take a lot more interest in that parking bylaw if only I had a car.

Some folks are always parking
 Where they shouldn't ought to be.
 But I draw the line at anyone
 Who tries to park on my knee.

MEIGHEN'S speeches seem to be made of "I am not," "I did not," "I am not going to do that," and the last and final "Build higher the tariff wall."

THE picture September Morn used to shock a lot of people, but today it seems tame even to a Sunday school class.

A MATADOR has saved a million dollars. He certainly threw the bull to some advantage.

BUT what is the use of a million dollars to a man if he has lost the power of enjoyment. There's more fun in throwing the bull than in spending a million.

I AM going to ask the editor if I may write the memorandum to the two defeated candidates.

I HAVE been wondering which is worst to be beaten at an election or for the other chap to get the girl.

EITHER my wife or I is to have a new hat this fall. Guess which.

INDIAN PETROGLYPH IN MUSEUM COLLECTION
 Reproduction of Prehistoric Stone Presented by Harlan I. Smith

One of the recent gifts to the Prince Rupert museum collection was the east of an Indian Petroglyph which was found a few years ago on the Kispiox River near Hazelton and is said to be of pre-historic origin. The original is of granite and is still at Hazelton although a number of museums would like to get it. The plaster cast was made by Harlan I. Smith and presented to the museum by him.

"My clothes used to be yellow - now they are snowy white"

"I always had trouble with my clothes—they used to come out so yellow. Then a friend told me about Rinso. I found it makes a wonderful soap solution. This removed every bit of dirt and then it all rinsed out completely. There was nothing left to yellow the clothes—as there was no soap to stick—it was all dissolved.

"I am now delighted with my wash—my clothes are always snowy white."

—A letter received by the makers of Rinso.

Just shake some Rinso into a saucepan, add hot water, and you'll get the wonderful soapy solution that is the only soap you need for your set tubs, your boiler, your washing machine. Rinso soaks dirt out.
