BRITISH JAILS NOT VERY FULL

New Methods of Treatment of Criminals Results in Fewer Jail Birds

LONDON, Dec. 9.—Probationary methods for adults and the "Borstal" treatment for young people have been responsible for a marked decrease in the population of British prisons So much so that more than 20 jails in England and Wales, or one-third of the total, have been closed since 1914. There are now only about 40 prisons in use throughout the country and these are not fully occupied.

A Home Office official says that fewer and fewer people are being committed to prison because the tendency now is to reform a man or woman if it be at all possible. The increased use of probationary methods has worked well and in the opinion of the official the time is not far distant when prisons will be used only for habitual criminals with whom all attempts at reform have failed.

During the first few years of this century approximately 500 out of every 100,000 of the population were sent to prison each year. Today the percentage is just over 100 in the 100,000. The greatest drop has been in convictions for drunkenness and similar offences.

MAY ABOLISH DEATH DUTIES

London Chronicle Comments on Proposal Made Recently for This Province

LONDON, Dec. 9.—The Daily Chronicle published the following in a recent issue: "Some people will be green with envy of the movement in British Columbia to secure recognition of the province as the most comfortable place for millionaires to lie in. It is to be done, if it is done, by abolishing death duties. Florida set the example and has its reward in the settlement there of thousands of people who, having amassed great fortunes, desire that in death, as in life, the tax collector shall make the smallest possible inroads into them.

If Florida, why not British Columbia? It will not admit that its climate is inferior to that of the southernmost state whose shores are lapped on one side by the Atlantic and on the other by the Gulf of Mexico. Indeed, the all-the-year mildness of British Columbia is declared to be "ideal for those in the sunset of life." Nowhere else can retired millionaires hope to live longer or die less unpleasantly, and, if given the assurance that their estate will pass undiminished to their heirs, nowhere else will they die in greater content.

"So the provincial government is being urged to ask the legislature next session to abolish the succession duties. They yield about £150,000 a year, and, if only the millionaires are attracted, it should not be difficult to find full compensation for loss of that. The product of income and property taxes would be swollen; land values would increase; the "pull" of the province would in many ways be strengthened; and, meanwhile, there would be substantial picking for real estate agents and others who have anything to sell. If only the government will oblige them, they are hoping to find good customers among the retired business men of Eastern Canada and the United States. We should not be surprised, indeed, if the lure reached some of our own countrymen. The Channel Isles are the almost-tax-free Mecca of some, but against death duties, at any rate, they are not so secure in Jersey or Guernsey as they might be in the remotest province of Canada.

STEWART

Development work is to proceed throughout the winter on the Albany group on the south fork of Glacier Creek. The property was bonded last summer by Edward G. Brown of Vancouver and associates.

Jake Hawkinson is branching out into the coal business, the freighter Mogul having brought 100 tons for him on her last trip from the south.

William Dann, formerly of Stewart, is now operating a garage on Pender Street in Vancouver.

A leak in the Premier Co.'s new oil tank covered the head of the bay last week with a coating of oil. It took about a week of constant work to drain the tank and make repairs.

ALICE ARM

The outlook for mining in this district is bright again and next year it is expected there will be more properties in operation than has been the case for several years. Among the active properties will be the Toric, Matilda, La Rose, Esperanza, Wolf, Devlin Zinc and Sunset. There is nothing definite as to the future for the Dolly Varden and Wolf mines but there is a large amount of ore on these properties which it is confidently expected will be developed before many years elapse.

There is still considerable building activity in Alice Arm. Marshal Smith and Charles Ripley are adding to their residence on Garden Island while Charles Hutchinson is also adding to his three bungalows at Silver City.

Mrs. Helen Nucich has left for Prince Rupert where she will spend the winter with her daughters, Helen and Christina, who are attending school there.

The marriage will take place next Monday of C. M. Smith and Mrs. A. P. Sargent. Both are receiving the congratulations of many friends.

Steve Dumas, store was scorched by fire last Friday night but prompt action prevented serious damage being done.
