BLACKWOOD on Bridge

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

Players' Personalities Are Important Part of Game

Mr. Champion is practically perfect on the play of the cards. Where he falls down is in playing the people. Look what happened to him in today's deal.

He elected to open the king of clubs against Mr. Muzzy's three no trump contract. Mr. Heinste signaled with the six spot and the king was permitted to win. A small club was led next and Mr. Muzzy killed the jack with the ace.

After a brief (and faulty) analysis of the situation, Mr. Muzzy now led the jack of hearts. He had no particular purpose in selecting this card and some other time, in the same set-up, might have led the queen or eight spot.

Anyway, Mr. Champion played low, especially since he was desperate for his partner to get in and lead a club through Mr. Muzzy's guarded ten.

Mr. Champion was too greedy. The jack of hearts held and Mr. Muzzy promptly shifted to the king of diamonds. Mr. Champion won and returned a diamond. Mr. Muzzy then ran with his nine tricks—four diamonds, one club, one heart and three spades.

Mr. Heinste could hardly believe what had happened. "Champion," he said, "if you take the first heart trick and continue clubs, you're bound to beat him. You'll always get three clubs and the two red aces."

Mr. Champion had noticed this, too, but he hoped nobody else had. Naturally, he didn't care to discuss it any further so he turned the conversation into one of his lessons to Mr. Muzzy.

The suit in which you have the most winners is the one you should establish first, Muzzy," he said. "Just pound out the king of diamonds as soon as you get in and continue the suit until I win the ace. Now nothing can beat you. If I continue clubs, it makes your 10 good. Anything else gives you time to set up heart tricks."

Mr. Muzzy's retort was not too logical. But it was unanswerable. "I made it, didn't I?" he said.

New Member Added to Welfare Staff

Mrs. Sheila Jones, MSW, has been added to the staff of Social Welfare in Prince Rupert. Manager St. John Madely announced today. This brings the complement of the social workers up to three.

Mrs. Jones is the wife of Fred Jones, Civic Centre director here. She is a graduate of the University of B.C. and has five years experience in group work.

R. I. Stringer, Regional administrator, is expected to arrive here Thursday on one of his periodic visits.
