Going To Bed And Getting Up.

What a difference there is between going to bed at night and getting up in the morning. There is an even greater difference between going to bed in the morning and getting up in the morning.

At night an hour is nothing. In the morning five minutes seems like a week. To get up five minutes ahead of time seems to many like committing a crime, whereas going to bed an hour after time is quite the proper thing.

If it is right and proper to be on the job at nine o'clock, most people seem to think five or ten minutes after nine will do just as well.

At night many people think they will get a good start in the morning and set the alarm clock a few minutes ahead. When they awaken they find that they are not as enthusiastic about that good start as they were on the previous night, so they stay in that long and in all probability go to sleep again and oversleep their time.

In the evening people often devote considerable time to dressing themselves properly, giving their hair needed attention and generally making themselves presentable. In the morning everything is different. There is not time for all that. There is just time to grab a comb, read the matted locks asunder with it, and then make for the breakfast room.

By a little indulgence in the morning it is easy to break the good habits of years and oversleep the set time for rising. Be ware the first indulgence. Get up on the dot.

C.P.R. Will Hold To Peace River.

The C.P.R. has got a hold on the Peace River country and is not likely to relinquish it. Recent evidence of this is seen in the decision of that company to form a branch of the C.P.R. colonization department at Edmonton for the purpose of securing settlers for the Peace River country and locating them on the lands contiguous to the railway which it at present operates.

The recent interest of the C.P.R. in Prince Rupert is accounted for largely by the fact that they are in the Canadian Northwest to stay. The probability is that they will get a better hold on the Edmonton, Dunvegan and B.C. than a lease and will extend that line toward the Pacific coast through the best part of British Columbia. In doing this they will have to be aided by the Dominion Government and this aid they will doubtless receive.

Naturally the Pacific outlet is what interests us. There is but one and that is Prince Rupert. Any arrangement for a northern Pacific outlet to the C.P.R. must include Prince Rupert.

Value Of Getting C.P.R. Here.

Under the present system of government it is quite evident that there must be locational rivalries and that the competition between the Canadian National and the C.P.R. must get itself mixed up with political strife. As long as this part is dependent on the Canadian National alone for its service and support it must be opposed more or less by the C.P.R.

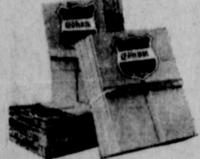

Let the C.P.R. be interested here ever so little and the condition is changed. We no longer become a political football, bunted back and forth by the contending parties. We attain stability. Under those conditions we could look for the support of the C.P.R. as well as of the Canadian National and our prosperity would be speeded up very considerably.

MURDER CASE AT HAZELTON

Circumstances Surrounding Alleged Killing of Matthew McLean Given by Omineca Herald

The skeleton that was found washed up on an island in the Skeena River near Salvas some weeks ago has been identified as the body of Matthew McLean, an Indian, who disappeared a year ago, says the Omineca Herald. A coroner's jury at Hazelton last Friday night decided also that death had been due to violence, or something like that. Since then three suspects have been arrested.

It will be remembered that a year ago, September 12, 1924, to be exact, some Indians and half-breeds had a celebration on the Hazelton reserve and that it wound up as most such celebrations do, with a fight. The fight caused a session of the police court. Several were convicted for participation in the party and some for supplying the fire-water.

But that was not all. Evidence was found on the bank of the Bulkley River of a desperate fight having taken place. Blood had been spilled, clothing had been torn and left lying about. Matthew McLean, a cripple Indian, was missing. The police were baffled. The missing man was well known all over the district, but not a trace could be found. Foul play was suspected, but to produce the body was the steeper.

Gun-a Noot Cleared

An attempt was made by some parties to hang the responsibility on Simon Gun-a-noot who had been in town that day. A pretty good yarn had been framed up and Simon never knew how near he was to being arrested. But investigation of the yarn cleared the big Indian of any knowledge of a crime or any participation in the celebration. It was a clear plant against Gun-a-noot.

But what became of McLean? That was a closed door for thirteen months when the Skeena River came to the assistance of the police and gave up the skeleton of the missing man.

The skeleton was comparatively easy to identify. McLean had a crooked foot, a crooked hip and a crooked shoulder. The skeleton corresponded with these deformities.

Making Good Case

With the remains on hand and a coroner's jury verdict of death by violence, the police put machinery in motion to round up suspects and material witnesses. A good deal of success has been achieved thus far and a real case will soon be placed before the magistrate for preliminary hearing, is the expectation of the local police.

The supposition is that following the fight on the bank of the Bulkley River a year ago and more that the victor or victors, after killing McLean, carried the body out onto the bridge that crosses the Bulkley just before that river joins with the Skeena, and threw it overboard into the current. Had the island in the lower Skeena, about 70 or 80 miles, not proved such an obstruction, the remains would probably have gone out to sea and thus sealed forever the mystery.

WHERE IS THE JOKER?

Editor, Daily News.
About this time of year there is always many people unemployed in Canada, which is wholly unnecessary, as I am never out of a job when I want to work, and I have been all over the country from Sydney to Victoria and from Vancouver to Dawson.

As I am leaving for Vancouver shortly in order to join the Ku Klux Klan, I would like to advise the unemployed of Prince Rupert to join some secret organizations, they will find it a great benefit through life and the trifling expense of fees, dues, etc., will be returned a hundred fold financially and socially. All employment agents, employers, and men in influential positions, belong to secret orders. Why not join up and get the benefits that are going?
The first lodge I joined was a

ENJOYABLE DANCE GIVEN BY ELKS FOR XMAS CHEER FUNDS

First of Series Augur for Success of Future Events of the Same Kind

The first of a series of dances that the Elks are holding for the purpose of raising money for their Christmas Cheer fund, was given last night augurs well for those that are to follow. There was a nice crowd present and all seemed to enjoy themselves.

Kenny Rood's Serenaders played some of the newest fox trots and waltzes and it was shortly after two o'clock when the party broke up. Supper was served shortly before midnight with Mrs. Carroll in charge.

In the course of the evening drawings took place for five boxes of chocolates, the proceeds going to the fund.

The event was in charge of Exalted Ruler L. Murray Fuller and a committee consisting of Kenny McQuaig, Dave Balfour and Andy Donald.

"Why did they put Jack out of the football game?"

"For holding."

"Oh, isn't that just like Jack."
