TURKS ADOPTING WESTERN HABITS

Church and State Separated, Monogamy, Hats, Posture, Result of Change

DEMOCRACY IN FORM ONLY

Little Real Change Beneath Surface in Life of Common People

(Manchester Guardian)

There can be little doubt that the rulers of Turkey have to a large extent realised their avowed ambition to create a sovereign and independent nation-state of the western type. They have adopted a democratic constitution; they are thoroughly at home in the crude nationalistic phraseology of the west; they have achieved by their deposition of the Khalif even more than a complete separation between church and state, and have assumed to the state many of the tasks (such as education) that were previously carried out by the priesthood; and we know to our cost their importance in international affairs. But they are endeavoring also to change the customs and habits of their country. They are insisting on monogamy, they are encouraging the use of western dress, even of western hats; and now we learn that innovations are to be expected in the practice of religion—that soon the devout in Turkey will be praying seated instead of in prostrations, and (most significantly) in Turkish instead of in Arabic.

Deep Changes

All these things seem to point to deep changes in the national life—as we might indeed expect after such an event as the abolition of the Khalifate. But it is significant that they are all the result of legal enactment, or at least of official encouragement from above, not of spontaneous growth from below; the government of Turkey (like that of Russia) is really as much concerned to remodel and re-create the social and economic life of its subjects as to cause disturbances in international politics. But we are inclined to wonder how far this is possible, how far the copious legislation that is being enacted is in any fundamental way changing the lives of the Turkish people.

After all, the democratic forms of government that have been adopted do not in any real way express the popular will; they only veil a despotic authority that will not last for ever. It would be rash, therefore, in view of the secular conservatism of the east, to assume that any permanent westernisation of Turkey (or indeed of any eastern people) is possible.

Nationalist Movement

It is true that the highly industrialised state of Japan and the growing nationalist movements in China and India suggest that we may be on the threshold of a new and incalculable period in world history, in which the political and industrial conceptions of the west may transform, in ways not to be foreseen, the whole life of the east. But even in these countries the plain man, and more especially the peasant, goes on cultivating his garden and worshipping his gods with little regard to what the politicians or industrialists may do; and even if they disturb him it is not unlikely that he will relapse into the old life as soon as the grievances created by them have been remedied.

WAIT UNTIL CALLED

An old country couple were in an omnibus for the first time, and as they went along the streets of London they became very uneasy. On hearing the conductor call "St. John's" and then "St. James," the old chap became fidgety, and said to his wife: "Mary, isn't it time we got out?"

"Divent show yer ignorance Harry," she said, "wait till yer name is called. — Burnt Island Shipyard Journal.

MINE CAVED IN

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 29.—Two people were killed and nine injured when a tunnel caved in at the La Prieta mine in the state of Chihuahua. It is believed several miners were entombed.

TREAT COLORED RACES AS EQUAL

Prominent Speakers at Church Congress in England Urge Changed Attitude

LONDON, Oct. 20. — At the meeting of the Church Congress at Eastbourne Lord Willingdon and other speakers urged the necessity of treating all colored races with perfect equality, with especial reference to the treatment of the people of India.

The subject was "Race Problems," and the president introduced it with the blunt reminder that Jesus Christ was an Asiatic, and that three of the great saints of the Church, St. Cyprian, St. Athanasius, and St. Augustine, were Africans. Later an Indian speaker, Mr. Shoran Singha, gave yet sharper point to the Bishop of Chichester's reminder by asserting that today, as an Asiatic, Jesus Christ in some of the British Dominions would find the door of the Christian Church slammed in his face.

Lord Willingdon's Warning

Lord Willingdon is a long, lean, handsome Englishman, blessed with more than English urbanity. He has a beautiful voice, perfectly trained, and was easily heard by his large audience. Everyone knew, of course, that he had returned from India recently after eleven consecutive years of administration in Bombay and Madras, and that he was not a mere theorist. It was no comfortable doctrine that he had to preach. Though, he said, India had been received at the Imperial Conference and into the League of Nations as a full partner in the Commonwealth of peoples, yet certain incidents which had occurred since the war had led educated Indians to doubt the good faith of the promise to give India ultimately responsible government. The white races, declared Lord Willingdon, must treat all colored men in a spirit of absolute equality and give up the attitude of color superiority. "It is not the color of a man that makes the man; it is the character that counts. The white man must no longer dominate the colored men even for their good. There will be difficulty for the white man has to meet upon terms of absolute equality those whom he previously regarded as his inferiors."

The address was frequently interrupted with loud cheers, and there was great and prolonged applause at the end, though, it must be added, many members of the Congress remained dubious and silent.

Color Bar

J. H. Oldham, was, if possible, more bewildering to the old guard than Lord Willingdon himself. Moslems, he reported, were becoming Bolsheviks, not because they believed in Bolshevism, but because the Bolsheviks treated them as equals, while other white peoples regarded them as inferiors.

Rev. W. W. Cash, of the Church Missionary Society, stated that the brotherhood of Moslems of different races was more real than the brotherhood of Christians, and for that reason both the Pagans and the Christians of the East were going over to Mohammedanism.
