Cow Bay Question Again Before City Because of Demand for the Waterfront in that Neighborhood

The city council sat for two hours and a quarter last night in conference with George R. Naden, deputy minister of lands, and G. C. MacKay, district engineer for the provincial department of public works, on the question of the city giving assent to the filling in of Cow Bay in return for a strip of waterfront presumably to be used for the purpose of a fishermen's wharf. After the lengthy discussion, the mayor and four members of the council put through a resolution giving its tacit consent to the project providing the provincial government gives the city three hundred feet of waterfront on the west side of the mouth of Cow Bay and provided, at the suggestion of the mayor, the federal government takes steps to install adequate protection for the mosquito fleet at that point. The resolution was not passed, however, until after Aid. Casey, Ald. Smith and Ald. Stephens, apparently wearied with the delay in reaching a decision, had disgustfully filed out of the council chamber.

In calling the council to order at 5 o'clock, His Worship explained why the meeting had been called. The matter of a fishermen's wharf and shelter had been brought up on Tuesday evening in a letter from Mr. Stork. Mr. Naden had come to the city with a view to having the city and provincial government come to an agreement with respect to the exchange of waterfront property in return for the city's consent to the filling in of Cow Bay.

Waterfront Applications

Mr. Naden stated that he had been sent to Prince Rupert because there had been a number of applications for waterfront in the vicinity of Cow Bay and a final settlement between the provincial government and the railway company was desired. Two years ago the legislature had ratified an agreement in which it was provided that the city was to be offered 200 feet of waterfront in exchange for its assent to the filling in of Cow Bay. The object was to have an exchange made by which the railway company would receive the property inside Cow Bay and the government the 450 feet of waterfront outside. As the ultimate object of the railway company would be to fill in Cow Bay, the railway commission had made an order in March 1918 that the exchange between the provincial government and the railway company could not be made until the city gives its assent. Apart from that the city had no actual rights in Cow Bay. Mr. Naden made it clear that he had no authority to offer the city any particular portion of the waterfront involved but he had come to the conclusion that 200 feet of waterfront on the west side of the mouth of Cow Bay would better suit the city's requirements than the 200 feet on the east side originally offered and he was prepared, if the council approved, of making such a recommendation to the provincial authorities. As the situation now stood, no use could be made of the waterfrontage at this point by either the provincial government or the railway company until a settlement was reached with the city. If the city council refused to agree to some such exchange, it looked as if the agreement would be eventually broken and the city would then get no waterfront at all. If the city council and the provincial government came to an agreement, the waterfront could probably be put into operation.

A report from Mr. Thompson to the officials of the Canadian National Railways here states that upwards of 200 elk and deer are grazing on the course and orders have been issued that these animals be not molested as their presence there is beneficial in many ways, one of which being in keeping the course trimmed down.

Bears are also very numerous in the vicinity of the fairways and greens and on Lac Beauvert, close to one of the new greens, beaver have built a house which adds to the attractiveness of one of the natural hazards of the course.
