"Dear me, why?"

"Juist because I'm nae suner bedded than I'm sleepin', an' am nae suner wauken than I'm up. I've nae time tae enjoy masel' awa'."—Yorkshire Post.

MAN NOT ALLOWED TO DISPOSE OF HIS BODY

Is Property of Relatives Once He is Dead and Must be Buried if They Say So

LONDON, Oct. 22. — Under English common law a man may leave his property to whom he will but his body he cannot dispose of as it becomes the property of his relatives at his death. A recent case occured here which illustrated the point. A man directed in his will: "my body will be given to one of the London hospitals, preferably King's College Hospital, for anatomical use providing that when it is finished with it shall be cremated and the ashes cast to the winds." A relative, however, has claimed the body for burial in the family grave, and burie! therefore it will be.

The classic instance is that of a generation ago, when a body of London medical men concerned for the dearth of subjects for dissection in the medical schools formed themselves into a society, each member undertaking in his will to leave his body for dissection. Not one body, however, went to the schools, because they were all buried by relatives.

ATTEMPT MADE TO ENTER HEILBRONER STORE FROM REAR

An attempt was made last evening to forcibly enter Max Heilbroner's jewelry store from the rear. At 7.30, before the night watchman arrived, Mr. Heilbroner was sitting alone in his workshop when he heard the door being tried. He immediately tightened up all the fastenings and the would-be breaker then gave a shove which loosened the door from its hinges. By this time Mr. Heilbroner had seized a revolver which he keeps in the shop for such emergencies and stood waiting for his visitor should he persist in breaking in. In the meantime, a call was sent for the police and, by the time Sergeant McGlinchy had arrived, the intruder had decamped.

OLD MR. CARTER HELPED BY SIMPLE MIXTURE

"After taking Adlerika I feel better than for years. At my age (60) it is ideal — so different from other medicines." (signed) W. W. Carter. Adlerika is a simple mixture of buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., which removes GAS in ten minutes and often brings surprising relief to the stomach. Stops that full, bloated feeling. Brings out old waste-matter you never thought was in your system. Excellent for chronic constipation. — Ormes Limited, Druggists.
