Curious Originator of Curious Cult on Bail in Vancouver has Lured Many Women to his Group

Man Said to be Preacher, Waiter, Mechanic, Inventor, Author, Doctor, Teacher of Strange Doctrines to Females

VANCOUVER, Aug. 25.—Police here are trying to find out if John Bertram Clarke, the middle aged preacher, waiter, mechanic, inventor, author, poet, pseudo-doctor and masseur and the alleged "master of a strange cult, who was arrested here and who is now out on bail for $1,000 for an indecent act, is a fraud, a lunatic or just a mistaken enthusiast.

Clarke binds his pupils by strict oaths of secrecy and already he has quite a large following in Vancouver and other surrounding places. Although operating here but three weeks he seems to have gathered around him a large group of women, many of whom believe is a "master teacher." He is said to be connected with wealthy families in this city.

Letters numbering several hundred seized in the raid on the office in the Vancouver block, from which Clarke operated, show that his "pupils" consist of married women, stenographers, school teachers and business women in cities from Seattle to Medicine Hat, Alta.

Pledges of Secrecy

Advertisements in the classified columns of the papers asking for stenographers, and cards dropped at business colleges in the city asking them to send pupils for employment, formed Clarke's connecting link with the young girls he had enrolled in his "classes." For the older women he employed an advertisement asking for a woman "collaborator" in literary work. In both instances Clarke insisted on his "pupils" and collaborators signing pledges.

For the young girls the pledge used read as follows:

"I, the undersigned, having access to the confidential business of J. B. Clarke, make to him a most solemn promise and oath that under no circumstances whatever will I reveal to any persons any of the secret knowledge, codes, or anything said or done by any person or persons in the office or elsewhere. I will not even allow the fact to become known that I have made this most solemn promise. I will do all I promise and keep every appointment I make with him and always come at the exact time promised."

Older Women

The older women who were to "collaborate" with Clarke were required to sign the following agreement:

"We, the undersigned immortals, hereby join our minds, souls and bodies with Perfect Infinite Love now and forever in a union that shall survive so-called death, that we may collaborate in writing and in all other desirable things that are possible and practical for us to create or do, that all the Infinite and Eternal Perfection, the living ideal, the true and the beautiful, be created in subjectivity and aided into objective expression through our active life now joined and One for Eternity."

Girl Was Terrified

In the complaint made to the police the girl stated that she kept an appointment, and that after Clarke had asked her to fill in a card stating her personal ambitions and other questions he made several pertinent remarks regarding her health, and then subjected her to a physical examination of a personal nature. The girl was terrified and after leaving Clarke immediately went to the police as the waiting room was filled with other women and girls.

When Inspector McLaughlin raided the office and informed the waiting "pupils" that all appointments for the night were over, one young woman refused to leave, stating that she must see "The Master and Guide" as arranged.

It was not until the detective took Clarke through the office under arrest tha she was convinced the "lesson" could not be taken, and she protested the action of the police in arresting "The Master." Other "pupils" scurried off when they realized that the "cult" was being investigated.

Met Pupils Separately

According to the police Clarke made all his appointments for the evening, and worked with each "pupil" separately. Poetry played a large part in the teaching of "The Master," much of it allegedly his own composition.

"Oh the Pity of It All" was one of his favorites, which he intoned soulfully as follows:

Into my life there came a form
so fair,
Sweet was the presence, pure as childhood's prayer,
To earth heaven never greater blessing gave,
But short was the stay of the treasure rare,
The ethereal soul earth's trials
could not bear,
And now that loved form is lost in the grave.
Oh! the pity of it all!

Writes Ode On Love

One lengthy ode, entitled "Love Rule," by Clarke, gives the following axiom in its concluding lines:

By doing even small things well
That pleasure you in toil will find,
Be it of body or of mind,
And even "sin" will not you blight
When you excel in doing right.

Evil, according to Clarke, does not exist, save relatively. "The assumption of evil," it is stated in one of his lessons in higher attainment, "is based on the belief that there exists or can exist in our universe an erratic or inharmonious element or entity with such a nature that it is directly opposite to all order or progress and which has inherent sufficient dynamism to enable it to resist the operations of cosmological law. . . This evidently is the only legitimate meaning to the term "evil," and thus definitely it becomes clear to the rational mind that the existence of evil other than as a mere assumption without basis in reality, is logically absurd."

Claims to be Minister

A certificate showing Clarke to be an ordained minister of the "Universal Church of The Master," organized in Washington, D.C., in November, 1908, and which authorizes Clarke to "solemnize marriages, officiate at funerals, and perform any and all rites devolving on a minister of the gospel" was found among the papers seized.

Another certificate from a Seattle firm declares that Clarke is a "good mechanic and practical inventor."

According to Clarke's instructions to his "pupils," when they have progressed in the cult they will find that "voices speak; music weird, thrilling and enthralling, sounds in the inner corridors of the mind; there are inner lights, visions and dreams; strange and intense emotions are aroused in mind and body, and the energy of the mind creatures within is well nigh overwhelming."

Strange Instruction

The New Series of Advanced Instruction for Awakened Minds appears to be directed largely toward making Clarke's clients consider him in the nature of a demigod, judging from the character of the affirmation or belief, tacked on the end of the first lesson.

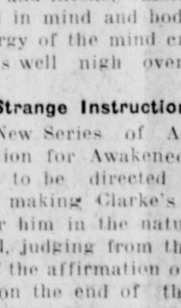

The affirmation, which the tyro must learn, reads:

"I am now on The Way, and I have found My Guide, and while I know that I need My Guide, the Guide needs me, so in our union both receive a true gift in the Barter of Life."

Other affirmations along similar lines are made after each of the other 500 lessons on Higher Attainment.

In addition to a large file of personal correspondence, showing that he had operated in Seattle, and through women there was getting in touch with women and girls in Vancouver, the police seized several files of letters from city and suburban points which showed that many women and girls in Vancouver were already taking "lessons" from "The Master."

HAZELTON

H. M. Wilson of Terrace has been given the contract for the erection of the nurses' home at the Hazelton hospital. The contract price is slightly under $9,000. Work will be commenced immediately and the home is to be ready for occupation by November 15.

Mrs. MacKay and family will leave Hazelton about the first of next month for Calgary where they will make their permanent future home.

A train load of cedar poles was shipped from this district last week by the Hanson Lumber & Timber Co. It was the first train load of material to be despatched from here since the Silver Standard mine sent out a tramload of high grade ore in 1913.

George G. Bushby of Prince Rupert attended the Hazelton Flower Show last week.

Thomas Forrest of Skeena Crossing, who has been in the hospital for some time, left last week for Kamloops.

Miss Joy Ford, who has completed her nurses' training course at the Hazelton Hospital, is now recuperating from an operation for appendictis and will leave shortly for her home in Armstrong.

SMITHERS

The driving of a 300 foot tunnel to tap rich surface showings at depth on the Harvey mine is just about completed.

J. C. K. Sealey is now able to be up and around again after a long and serious illness.

Burns Lake won a baseball game from Smithers here last week by a score of 21 to 15.

Mr. and Mrs. James Fay have left on a motor trip to Vernon where it is likely they will locate.

Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Windt and family have left for Quesnel on a motor trip.

Mrs. William Thorne and family of Prince Rupert are holidaying at Lake Kathlyn.

Mrs. E. S. Tait of Prince Rupert is visiting at Glacier Lodge, Lake Kathlyn, with Mr. and Mrs. Olof Hanson.
