TO LECTURE ON INTERIOR

P. Escott-North, F.R.G.S., Visits Bulkley Valley and Lakes District.

SMITHERS, Aug. 7.—The English traveller and lecturer, P. Escott-North, a Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society, arrived in Smithers last Tuesday and spent a couple of days here in the course of his tour through Central British Columbia. On his present trip, Mr. Escott-North is taking motion pictures and gathering information that he intends using in a series of lectures in the Old Country this coming winter. For this purpose, he spent the last couple of weeks in the Francois and Ootsa Lake districts where he exposed over 400 feet of film which he will use to illustrate his lectures.

On a former trip to America he took a series of motion pictures illustrating cow-boy life as it actually is on the ranges and plains of Canada and the United States and produced the photo-play called "The Cow-Boy" which made a great hit in London last June.

Mr. Escott-North motored from Burns Lake to Smithers and, although he has travelled in all parts of the world, he stated that he thought the Bulkley Valley was one of the most fertile districts he had seen in his wanderings and predicted a great future for this section when the country became more settled and markets were estiablished for the produce.

Ootsa Lake Land

There are hundreds of acres of land in the Ootsa Lake district owned by English investors and Mr. Escott-North, at their request, made an inspection of their holdings while in that country. He found that a considerable portion of the land was of good quality but realized that, as an investment for the owners, it must prove somewhat of a failure, as they had purchased it when the boom was on in pre-war days and prices high, whereas now that the country was being opened up other lands equally as good were being made available for pre-emptions or for purchase at prices considerably less than what his clients had paid.

From Smithers, Mr. Escott-North went to the Indian village at Kitwanga to obtain some scenes of the totem poles and other items of interest at that place. In all he expects to expose about 7,000 feet of film on this tour and is returning to England early in September in order to complete the work and be able to start on his lecture tour in October.

FORMER GOVERNOR OF ALASKA IS AUTHOR IN SATURDAY EVE. POST

Scott C. Bone, former governor of Alaska, is the author of an article "Alaska from the Inside," which appears in the current issue of the Saturday Evening Post. The article presents Alaska's problems in a terse but effective manner and should be interesting to local readers. There are two illustrations — one a large panoramic view of the city of Juneau and the other a picture of the governor's mansion at Juneau from which the late President Harding, the only president ever to visit Alaska, delivered an address.

FOUNDATION WORK ON SMITHERS BUILDING

Hanson and Shockley Pouring Concrete for New Court House at Smithers

SMITHERS, Aug. 7—The work of pouring in the concrete for the foundation of the new provincial buildings being erected at Smithers was commenced on Wednesday morning. The contractors, Shockley and Hanson of Prince Rupert, have experienced considerable difficulty in obtaining the water necessary to start this work and were unable to get any by sinking a well at the site of the building. The water they are now using is being brought in a pipe line from the well at the government barns.

BUSTER KEATON IN BIG COMEDY

"Seven Chances," at Westholme Theatre Tonight, is Well Known Story

Buster Keaton, in his picture "Seven Chances," to be shown tonight and tomorrow at the Westholme Theatre, is a broker who has placed his business in a precarious position by his donations to every charity that has applied for funds. His partner, supposing there is plenty of money, has cashed a bad check, and faces criminal prosecution.

Into this situation walks a lawyer with the announcement that Buster's eccentric grandfather has died leaving him $7,000,000 with the proviso that he is married by 7 o'clock on the evening of his 27th birthday. It so happens that this is the morning of Buster's 27th birthday, and to get the money he must be married by 7 o'clock that evening.

He is all set because he knows just the girl he wants to marry. He gets into his car and goes to her house where he proposes and is accepted. Then he says he is glad she accepted him because otherwise he would have lost the seven million. She walks out on him because she thinks he is marrying her merely to get his money.

Buster returns to the office downcast. The partner insists that he must marry someone to save him from going to jail and to save the firm. The girl, in the meanwhile, telephones to the office at a time when the partner is trying to talk Buster into marrying. The partner takes down the phone and sets it on the desk while he continues to argue with Buster. The girl overhears enough to convince her that Buster loves her and is being forced into a marriage with another girl to save the partner.

Buster and the partner leave the office with the lawyer to try to find another girl. The girl cannot get the office because the telephone is down so she sends a note by messenger to tell Buster that she is waiting for him and will marry him.

Buster, his partner, and the lawyer go to the country club where Buster proposes to every girl he meets until one finally accepts him. Before the girl accepts, the partner has given up the country club as hopeless and gone with the lawyer to a newspaper office where he causes to be published a picture of Buster and a story to the effect that he will marry any girl who is at the Grand Street Church by 5 o'clock in a bridal outfit.

Buster, in the meanwhile, has made arrangements for the girl who accepted him to be at the same church at the same hour. Buster arrives and when the girl shows up he is ready to marry, but the deadly work of the newspaper story and picture has sent hundreds of brides to the church, looking for a husband with seven million dollars.

The crowd becomes so great that Buster has hundreds of brides instead of one on his hands and cannot marry any one of them. During the struggle the messenger from the girl arrives and gets him. Buster is now confronted with the problem of getting out of the church and away from the mass of brides to reach his girl. Not only must he reach her but he must marry here before seven. Telling the messenger to get a minister and take him by taxi to the girl's home, he escapes from the church and starts for the girl.

From that point on until the hair-raising and surprising finish of the picture, Buster is in one tangle of brides after another, each new gathering of girls stopping him from reaching his true destination with the time always growing closer and closer to the fatal 7 o'clock.

The Lucky Youth

FORTUNATUS had only to don his enchanted cap and make a wish to obtain anything his heart desired. It is not given to ordinary mortals to have so simple and direct a mode of filling their wants.

But have you ever considered what a boon advertising has become? Everything you need or wish is displayed for your benefit in the advertising columns. Merchants and manufacturers use advertising to lay before you their most attractive wares. You have only to choose at your ease the things you care most about before actually going to see them in the stores.

Advertising is continually making the world better dressed, better fed and housed. It is increasing the world's capacity for things that elevate, improve and idealize the important business of living. It is a big, vital force in fostering convenient, comfortable and useful lives.

The Man in the Moon SAYS:—

ONE of the strange things in this life is that a man can run for miles and only move two feet.

To attract the tourists why not put on some horse races in McClymont park?

Or some of our local Ford drivers might also give the tourist something to talk about back home by giving a few free exhibitions of high diving at selected spots.

THERE was one big advantage Adam had in the Garden—he didn't have to put on a hard boiled collar on a cold morning.

AND Eve didn't have to bawl him out for staying at the club too late.

IT'S wonderful what a lot can be excused in a pretty woman.

A MAN named Match recently married a Miss Cole. Now watch their smoke.

IF a soldier sat on a tack would it be correct to say that he was attacked in the rear?

TRYING to write Man in the Moon days when news comes in waiting for you is something like trying to put on a pair of wet sox.

IF the bills that arrive at the end of the month were only receipted one might look forward to the mail.

FOR something to keep you occupied try and wrap up a porcupine in a sheet of newsprint.
