Everyone Busy On Grain Movement.

This is the time for everyone to be busy in connection with the proposed movement of grain through this port. The presence of the elevator changes the outlook here altogether. It will be the means of providing freights for vessels which otherwise could not operate.

There seem to us to be two methods open. One is to induce Japanese ships to come here and operate in connection with the Canadian National and the other for the Canadian National to operate their own ships from here. One or the other will have to be done and it would seem to be the path of wisdom for the C.N.R. to put on their own vessels.

It is good to learn from F. G. Dawson that the company has been discussing plans for the operating of vessels from this port. Doubtless they have done so before this, but the absence of freights has made it almost an impossible venture. Now that the elevator is here and there is every probability that we shall have the business, the National should be the ones to get it.

With the local grain committee active, with the railway co-operating and with all the citizens pushing every pound toward getting business this way, Prince Rupert should soon be on the commerce map. Hitherto we have been trading. Now we aim to engage in commerce and get a place on the map of the world.

Need Of Capital In Any City.

Every city, especially every young city is in need of capital to start industries and develop resources. For that reason capital should be encouraged. On the other hand it is not good policy to give away all the rights of the people in favor of capital. There is a happy medium. If we give away too much now, we have to pay up afterwards. If on the other hand we adopt the policy of the past and refuse to aid big industries and to encourage them to come we are making a big mistake. Capital will not go to a place where it is likely to be abused. It must have an assurance of fair play.

It is all very well for people to rave over the encroachments of the big interests. They are often overbearing and have to be kept in their place. These same big interests can make or break a community. To have them here is worth everything to the place. To exclude them is fatal.

Only Their Home; No Lives Lost.

Sometimes we read of a house being burned, as we did yesterday. No lives were lost, simply the home destroyed. There is no thrill about a family losing a home but there is a thrill when people are burned to death.

And yet few of us can realize what it must mean to lose a home. If we apply it to ourselves and think of what it would be like if all our intimate possessions were gone and we had no means to replace them.

Many people lose their homes and are too proud to seek or take assistance from others. The result is they never recover what is lost. In any event the lost things are irrecoverable. We cannot replace the gifts from friends, the curios, the various articles that make the home different from others. It is tragedy to lose the home and for that reason the greatest care should be taken at all times to protect it.

OBJECTION TO CLOSING DOWN WORK ON ROAD

City Council Passes Resolution and Will Communicate With Member for District

The city council in the form of a resolution moved by Ald. Casey and seconded by Ald. Perry last night decided to register its formal objection to the action of the provincial government in closing down work on the Kaiaen Island highway. The resolution instructed the city clerk to communicate with Hon. T. D. Pattullo, member for Prince Rupert drawing attention to the fact that the city had completed its portion of the work and that, on the same day as the city had finished, government work had also ceased with the government portion of the road still impassable for traffic.

Leading up to the resolution, Ald. Casey stated that the provincial government had stumped the city into doing its portion so the development of the highway might be hastened. The city had kept faith and had done its work to the last letter with the result that a road had now been produced which was a distinct credit to the city. On the other hand, the day the city finished the government had pulled its men off the work. Quite long enough had the city been made a monkey in an agreement with the provincial government and the railway company. They had set out what the city should do and the city had done it while they themselves, despite the agreements, did just as they saw fit. He thought that it was time the city draw to the attention of the provincial government the manner in which it had fallen down on this work.

Should Keep Faith

Ald. Casey also touched the matter of unemployment and said that the town was already filling up with men looking for jobs. In the past the city had endeavored to furnish work for the unemployed, and it would probably have to do so again this year. It was the duty, he felt, of the provincial government to carry on the work keeping faith with the city as well as the unemployed.

Ald. Larsen recounted how the minister of lands last spring had asked the city council to proceed with its work at once so the government could use the connection to get its supplies on the job. Mr. Pattullo had also informed the city at that time that there was plenty of money available to carry the road to Gallo-way Rapids and that there would be no delay in completing it. He thought that the council was quite justified in passing the motion submitted. He was of the opinion that not one tenth of the money allotted for the work had been expended.

"Perhaps it went towards paying for the over-expenditure on the University buildings," remarked Ald. Casey as the motion was put and unanimously carried.
