Military honors were accorded deceased at the funeral of the late William Keith which took place this afternoon at 2.30 from the First Presbyterian Church, Rev. Charles J. Cameron officiating. The service was attended by a large assemblage of mourning friends desirous of paying their last respects to the memory of a well known citizen. Arrangements were in the hands of the B.C. GUSTAFSON IS SENT OKALLA also sick in the jail. Mrs. McCutcheon did not know that accused was intoxicated but she heard him using bad language. R. B. Skinner saw accused about the time of the accident and knew that "he had a few drinks under his belt" from the language he was using.

Defence Witness

J. A. McRae, the star witness for the defence, asserted that accused was not intoxicated. He seemed to be "absolutely sober" but suffering from shock and excitement. McRae was working on the sidewalk in front of the city hall that night and saw the car rounding the corner. In spite of the fact that it was a wet night and he (witness) was about 120 feet from the car, McRae professed to have seen the wheel of the car on the opposite side to trim breaking. The judge asked McRae if he did not think the car could have been stopped by putting on the brakes before it overturned. McRae thought this could not have been done without a spill. McRae offered evidence as to Gustafson's character. He was a "mighty good boy" and, as for his taking a drink, he thought any "high spirited" boy would. Under cross-examination, McRae with emphasis by striking the rail of the witness stand forcibly with his hand, denied Mr. Jones' suggestion that he was a biased witness, that he had constructed his story, that, for any personal reasons, he was hostile to the police, and that he had coached the accused. Having driven a car since last May, McRae claimed to know "a lot about cars" and their actions in emergencies. He claimed that he had had some pretty close escapes and that it was only his good management that had prevented perhaps fatal results. The judge made some enquiries from McRae as to why he thought accused was being persecuted. McRae's reason for that statement, he said, was that the boy was being brought up again on the charge after he had been once dismissed.

Failed Take Corner

Accused, in the witness box told of having gone down town and having four glasses of beer and then something to eat. On the way home, the car failed to take the corner of Fulton Street and Third Avenue, owing to the wheel breaking. Just at the curb, the car fell on the hub and turned over on to the sidewalk. Accused admitted that he had been sick in the jail.

"Under the section on which you have been charged," said the judge in making his decision, "it makes no difference whether the car broke down. The essential factor is: Were you intoxicated? I think that the accident tends to corroborate the evidence of the constables to that effect. The evidence that you were intoxicated is conclusive. The officers swear positively that you were and that you admitted that the accident was your fault. You also admit yourself that you had been drinking. How anyone can get away from the fact that you were under the influence of liquor is beyond my comprehension. The officers have no interest in your case other than to enforce the law. They would be very negligent if they did not prosecute a case of this particular nature in a city like Prince Rupert where the streets are so narrow and there are so many children on them. If they had not prosecuted they would be subject in my opinion not only to severe censure but to dismissal.

Reversed Finding

"There is no other alternative for me but to reverse the finding of the magistrate and find you guilty of the offence. It must be emphasized that people under the influence of liquor cannot be permitted to drive cars. I sentence you to fifteen days in Okalla Prison with hard labor. If that is not sufficient warning to you and others, it will be made different in future."

Wife (with newspaper)—Here's an expression, "the saturated point." What's it mean, John?

Hub—Well, my dear, to illustrate, the saturated point is when the consumer gets soaked until he will no longer stand for it.

There was a timid knock at the door. "If you please, kind lady," the beggar said, "I've lost my right leg——"

"Well, it ain't here," retorted the lady of the house and slammed the door.
