Mercy Flight Toughest Trip For Rupert-Born War Pilot

Injured Kemano Bay Worker Flown to City Hospital

A Kemano Bay laborer is in good condition in Prince Rupert General Hospital after a mercy flight from the Aluminum Company of Canada site yesterday afternoon which the pilot described as "the toughest I have ever made."
 Pilot is Prince Rupert born Cedric Mah who has been flying for 12 years and now is piloting for Central B.C. Airways.
 "I've flown through all kinds of weather but before I try another flight like the one I did today, I think I'll quit," said Mah.
 The 90-mile trip to Prince Rupert which is an hour's normal flight with the Beaver-type aircraft May was flying, took 3 1/2 hours in yesterday's lashing storm which tossed the little plane around "like a feather."
 The mercy flight was undertaken when Reinhold Huth, 21-year-old German immigrant, was considered by Alcan's Dr. Arbor to be in serious condition.
 Huth received internal injuries when struck in the stomach in an accident Sunday. The Kemano Bay doctor made the flight with the patient who was operated on immediately. His Prince Rupert physician announced the operation as "very satisfactory," but further details of the injury were not known.
 All the bad weather encountered by Mah was en route here, "but it broke as we neared Rupert. I was very relieved," he said.
 Mah is well known in Prince Rupert. He was educated here and during the Second World War enlisted with the U.S. Air Force. He saw action in many sectors of the Far East.
 DUMPED FORTUNE
 He is the pilot who dumped a fortune into the Burmese mountains in August, 1944. The incident has been given a lot of publicity since. Briefly, the story is this:
 Mah was piloting a B-29 bomber which carried a load of $866,000,000 in Chinese currency or estimated at that time as $85,000,000 in U.S. funds. Heavy icing conditions over Burma so weighed down the big plane that Mah had to decide: either jettison cargo or crash land.
 "Out went the cargo," said Mah. There were several tons of greenbacks and it nearly broke our heart."
 Asked about the incident yesterday, the former war pilot said, with a grin:
 "You people always seem to remember the notorious things

Youngsters Tell Police How They Robbed Stores

Four young Prince Rupert boys appeared in police court this morning to answer to charges of breaking and entering eight establishments here between March 1 and September 21.
 The charges were laid by RCMP after an exhaustive search for the persons guilty of stealing more than $600 in cash and hundreds of dollars worth of goods in a series of break-ins during the past seven months.
 It is the first time police have announced results of their investigation of the burglaries which began last March 1 when goods valued at $51 were stolen from a Canadian National Railways caboose.
 The four boys, all neatly dressed and groomed, appeared with their parents before Magistrate W. D. Vance, who after hearing statements made by two of them read into the records adjourned the hearing until 2:30 p.m. Saturday.
 "In the meantime," said the magistrate, "you are to go home with your parents and keep out of trouble."
VERY SERIOUS
 "You are facing very serious charges. You could be sent to a boys institution for an indefinite period. You could be there for a long time.
 "Meantime you keep out of trouble and get to bed in good time each night."
 Magistrate Vance said he wished to read the statements given by the boys before Saturday and at that time would like a report from the welfare society.
 In asking a representative from the welfare society to report on the case Saturday, the magistrate said:
 "I would like to have a little background on these lads. They certainly knew their way around."
STATEMENT READ
 In the statements read in court, two boys told how they executed their plans.
 Charges against the boys, the two oldest both 13 years of age, one 11 and the other 10, besides the CNR theft, concern theft of tools, saws and other articles from Henry Lindseth; two break-ins into the Variety Store; one in Shell Oil Company and other burglaries from McRae Brothers, Howe and McNulty last Aug. 30, and theft a week ago last Sunday of $35 from Macey's cafe.
 Among the loot were rifles and ammunition, pens and many other articles, some of which have been recovered by police.
 An RCMP officer who was presenting the case said statements of the other boys were similar to the two read and presented them to Magistrate Vance for study.
 The boys left court in custody of their parents.

President Calls Down Ike Policy

HAVRE, Mont. (CP)—President Truman today accused Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower of having endangered the United States as commanding general in Europe by grave blunders which left the country unaware of Russia's threat to world peace.
 He said Eisenhower's 1945 advice that he saw no reason why Russia and the U.S. would not remain "closest possible friends" carried "great weight" and "did a great deal of harm."
 Truman chose a whistle stop speech here to launch his latest attack on the Republican presidential nominee.
 The president voiced praise of Democratic presidential candidate Adlai Stevenson, for having known "that Communism was dangerous and that we had to take measures to stop it."
