Canadian Airmen Have Own Paper

NORTH LUFFENHAM, England—Canadian airmen of No. 1 Fighter Wing, numbering with their families about 2,000 all told, have their own weekly newspaper now. It's called The Talepipe.

"Capable of more hot air than any publication in Britain," commented one of the editorial staff.

Cadet's Parade First

The first time in the history of Prince Rupert an air cadet parade was held at the armory last night. Commanding Officer Dick Garrett of 559 Squadron RCAC led the roll and 36 boys answered physical training instructor for the cadets through their spaces and the boys participated with real enthusiasm.

DISTRICT NEWS PEROW

Ed McLeod is out of hospital and has gone to work as a dealer in this district.

Jim Murphy, employed by Hay Bros., was burned around the face and hands when some gas exploded. He is recovering in the Burns Lake hospital.

A bridal shower in honor of Miss Lester Oppen was held at the home of Mrs. Art Sorenson on Wednesday afternoon. The bride received many useful and beautiful gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Loboe are at Excelsior Springs, Missouri, where Mr. Loboe is undergoing treatment at the Ball Clinic. Their children are with relatives at Decker Lake and Crescent Spur.

Mrs. O'Connor, junior high school teacher at Topley, visited Perow on Friday afternoon.

STEWART

Verner Allen, who was instrumental in financing the Marmot lead and zinc property, arrived by plane, accompanied by Owen McFadden and Harry Swan. McFadden and Swan are going to the Willoughby Creek property owned by Mr. Allen. Meantime, Mr. Allen has also made arrangements with Albert Casey and Bill Rowe for intensive prospecting of the Marmot holdings.

More than 200 tons of ore are now on the dump at the Silver Tip Mine and it is anticipated that regular shipments will be made to the Premier Mill next year.

Big game hunters invaded the Stewart district this week in the persons of Mr. George Fee, partner of Mr. Tom Wallace in the Western Woods Products Corporation, and Dr. Ralph Herron, physician at the Lebanon Hospital in Oregon. Leroy Wiggall, accountant for the logging company and Don Shelley, one of the company's contractors were also members of the party.

John Lehto and Angelo Bugnella are guides for the party. The hunters were flown into the Unuk River area by the Queen Charlotte Airlines. The arrival of Dr. Herron here is of some interest as a recent issue of the Post contained an article on the construction and financing of the Lebanon Hospital in Oregon through the unstinted efforts of that community. Dr. Herron's picture appears in one of the illustrations.

BIG PAPER MILL

CAPE TOWN (CP)—One of South Africa's largest industrial projects, a huge paper mill costing $3,500,000, is rapidly taking shape near Durban. In full production the mill will be capable of about 150 tons of paper a day, helping to make South Africa self-sufficient in most paper products except newsprint.

CORNBALL—A guy who does not know the score; a peasant; a seaman.

CUBE—A guy who is even more square than a cornball.

COFFO—For free or for nothing. "He got it for coffo."

Keep in touch with the office—Means the reverse. Don't bother us. A variation of the casting director's "Don't call us, we'll call you."

MEAT BALL—An unpleasant guy—a good guy not to have around.

MODULATE—To change one's status or condition. "He got modulated out of the mess hall into ground defence."

Take it Easy When Laundering Sweaters, Keep Them Beautiful

It's a sweater year, there's no doubt about it. There are fur jackets cut cardigan style and wool cardigans knit to resemble fur. Yes, the sweater crop is top fashion. Always popular with the high school and college crowd, this season they'll really lead the campus fashion parade.

The new styles are heavier, often coarsely knit on large needles. Some are enough like brother's football "letter sweater" to start a friendly family feud about whose is whose. Paris and Italy sponsor the torso-length sweater done in cable stitch or other fancy patterns. Long push-up sleeves and turtle necks or loose cowl necks make for an interesting bulky effect.

Many of the new blouses and sweaters have an open-necked look, but are filled in with white "tickies" made of cotton or other material. To be attractive, blouses and sweaters and lingerie touches must be kept immaculate—and that means frequent laundering.

Wherever the garment is especially soiled—neckbands and cuffs pick up more than their share of grime—dampen the soiled areas, applying a small quantity of detergent or soap, and brushing gently with a nail brush to dislodge the dirt. Then squeeze suds through the whole garment.

In laundering sweaters, especially the heavy ones, take it easy. Do only as much squeezing and agitating as is necessary to get them thoroughly clean. Too much handling tends to mat wool fibers. Always support the whole sweater in your hands when lifting it from the water, so that the weight of the water doesn't pull it out of shape. After rinsing, squeeze gently, then roll in a towel to remove excess moisture.

Umbrellas in pastel shades, teamed up with matching raincoats, give a colorful lift to the school girl's gloomiest day. They too, need frequent washing to keep their colors clear and bright. But they're no trouble.

Bedtime Snack solves laxative problem

"Constipation made me sullen all day. What a change since I started to use ALL-BRAN regularly! Even my wife notices it!" writes man from Ville Montmorency, Que. If you suffer from irregularity due to lack of bulk, try a bowlful of this toast cereal every night before bed. It may bring back the youthful regularity you thought long lost. ALL-BRAN is the only type ready-to-eat cereal that supplies all the bulk you may need. It's high in protein and iron. Not habit-forming. Kellogg's is so sure you'll like ALL-BRAN that if you're not completely satisfied after 10 days, send empty carton to Kellogg's, London, Ont., and get DOUBLE YOUR MONEY BACK!

Unusual Movie Ballet Produced by Canadian

By MURIEL NARAWAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer
LONDON (CP)—Ottawa's Guy Cote, assistant director with the National Film Board of Canada, may find his ears burning. People in London are talking about his "Between Two Worlds," a novel ballet film without words.

The film made its debut at the Edinburgh Festival and was given a private showing in London. The preview audience seemed divided in its reaction.

Danced by Ute Lemkow, husband of film star Mai Zetterling, the film tells the story of a blind artist living in an abstract world of his own imagining.

Against a kaleidoscopic background of moving color schemes and colored masks, he takes the audience through his blind world to an operating room where his sight is restored.

WEIRD ENDING
Instead of a happy landing, the film winds to a climax where the artist, terrified by the new world of sight, loses his own personality completely. From a colorful world of gay patterns he descends to beating against grey walls and walking down endless corridors to an ever-receding light ahead.

Cote directed "Between Two Worlds" while attending Oxford University on a scholarship. The idea for the film came from American artist Sam Kaner, who advanced the proposal in a conversation over coffee cups, later acting as producer and set designer. It might have gone no further, but for a visit to Oxford by Miss Zetterling. The star sold the idea to her husband, who took over the choreography and persuaded the 26-year-old Cote to take the director's job.

During his Oxford term, besides taking a first in chemistry, Cote successfully ran the Film Society, the Film Group and the university ski team. His first venture in film-making was in 1949 when he produced, co-directed and edited "Sestriere 1949," a documentary on skiing.

"Between Two Worlds" is an amateur production financed by donations, grants and private subscriptions. Costing just over $1,000, it was shot in five weeks in a gymnasium in Cheltenham, Gloucestershire—the only "studio" the company could afford. Technicians and stagehands were local amateur stage enthusiasts.
