LAUREL WHALEN BACK IN RUPERT

Somerville Cannery Co.'s Floating Cannery Arrives from Barnard Cove—Going South

After spending nearly four months at Barnard Cove, Princess Royal Island, packing salmon, the Somerville Cannery Co.'s floating cannery Laurel Whalen reached port last evening at six o'clock in tow of the tug Cape Scott. Having on board some five or six thousand cases of fish, the pack of the last week or so, the vessel will leave on Saturday for Vancouver in tow of the Hecate Straits Towing Co.'s tug Cape Scott. After discharging there, the vessel will return to her headquarters here and may be engaged in herring packing at Prince Rupert during the winter.

Though pink fishing was a failure, the Laurel Whalen had a fairly good season's pack the local management of the Somerville Cannery Co. reported this morning. During the season steamers called at Barnard Cove and loaded salmon from the Laurel Whalen, this being over and above that which is still on the vessel representing the last week or so's work.

W. J. Jefferson, who has been manager of the Laurel Whalen arrived here with the vessel and will proceed south with it at the end of the week. There is also a skeleton crew aboard. The employees on the Laurel Whalen, like the company's cannery at Seal Cove, were largely white and the staff included a number of university boys. There were a dozen Orientals.

The Seal Cove cannery is still packing chums and will continue to do so as long as they are available. Then the plant will start packing clams and continue to do so, it is expected, throughout the winter.

EUSHEY'S ATTITUDE TOWARD ELEVATOR

George Bushby's managers take exception to an interpretation of his speech at Smithers placed upon it by the Daily News. On re-reading the article it seems as if Mr. Bushby had been misinterpreted. He says, and his managers also state, that he is personally in favor of the elevator but that it was not built for the specific purpose of helping either the Bulkley Valley or Prince Rupert but as a national undertaking.

Mr. Bushby is conducting a clean campaign and this paper has no wish to misrepresent him in any way.

MAUD REACHES SEATTLE TO BE SOLD AT ONCE

Crew of Seven Men to be Dispersed Following Three Years Spent in Arctic

SEATTLE, Oct. 6.—Amundsen's exploration ship Maud which sailed from here June 3, 1922, with high hopes of drifting with the Arctic ice across the North Pole, returned last night. Her long career is over, perhaps or ever, for she has been ordered here by Amundsen to be sold and her crew of seven dispersed. The members of the crew have little to say of their three years amid the perils of the devastating ice pack. Although the Maud drifted and shouldered her way about 2,500 miles to the west of Nome, the currents carried her but little in a northerly direction. That was the reason Amundsen ordered the expedition abandoned.

The coldest weather experienced during the drift was 82 degrees below zero.
