ALBERT EDISON FOUND GUILTY

Sentence of Six Months Imposed on Man who Robbed Carl Frederickson of $240

Found guilty of stealing $240 from Carl Frederickson in a hotel room at Hazelton on June 5, Albert Edison was sentenced by Mr. Justice D. A. McDonald on Saturday afternoon to serve six months in jail from the time of his arrest. The jury brought in a recommendation for leniency and His Lordship said that he would allow his feelings to be influenced by this recommendation. Had it not been for that, he declared, his sentence would have been two years.

After the noon recess on Saturday, accused, who was on the stand on his own behalf, was cross-examined by L. W. Patmore, crown counsel, but the plausibility of his story remained unshaken.

L. S. McGill of Smithers, counsel for accused, occupied a full hour in his address to the jury. He attacked the credibility of the evidence of Mrs. Combs, the main witness for the crown, stressed his opinion that a conclusive case had not been made out against accused and suggested that there were several other persons beside Edison who possibly might have taken the money.

L. W. Patmore, crown counsel, felt that a clear and conclusive case had been made out against accused. There was no motive for the crown witnesses to tell other than the truth in which case accused's guilt was proven. In the course of his address, Mr. Patmore congratulated the provincial police on their effective work in having the accused under arrest within three hours after complaint of the theft had been made. "I must say," he declared, "that the police in this case did one of the snappiest and most clever pieces of work that I think was ever done in the province."

Judge's Charge

In his charge to the jury, Mr. Justice D. A. McDonald said at the outset that, from the evidence, the case appeared to be one of simple theft rather than the more serious charge of theft from the person. Apart from that of the woman Mrs. Combs, the evidence was mostly circumstantial. Circumstantial evidence was not as safe as direct evidence but most crime was proven through circumstantial evidence. It was necessary for the crown to weave a web of circumstantial evidence from which accused could not escape before a conviction could be found. It was up to the jury to decide on the quality and probability of the evidence given by various witnesses. The verdict would be reached according to the evidence that was believed.

The jury retired at 3:45 and returned forty-five minutes later with its verdict of guilty with a recommendation for leniency.

After accused, himself had again said that he did not take the money. Mr. McGill asked that, in view of the circumstances, a suspended sentence be passed. Accused he said was a hardworking man of a type that was necessary for the development of the country. Only his weakness and associates had led him into this trouble.

Prevent Other People

Mr. Justice D. A. McDonald, in passing sentence, said that he did not think he would be doing his duty if he suspended sentence. That would not tend to prevent other people from doing similar acts.

L. W. Patmore, crown counsel, asked for restitution of the $240 to Frederickson and an order to that effect was made by is Lordship.

That is what some people say.
Use a hammer quick and well,
Strike at everything pell mell.
Never try to mend a break,
For smashing things you kudos take.
So around the world you go
Pleasing those who nothing know,
Feeling like a hero brave
When in fact you are a knave.

THE other day a man tried to swallow his pride. He choked to death.

RUPERT HUGES IN TALK ON FLAPPERS

Children Today Not Born as Often But Live Longer Says Writer

Rupert Hughes, whose production of "Excuse Me" comes here for the mid-week showing is very definite in his opinion of flappers. To the question, "Do flappers make good mothers?" he replies:

"Do pullets make good hens? That depends somewhat on the roosters they chance to encounter. So the excellence of a girl's success as a mother, depends largely on the husband she gets. In spite of all modern inventions, a father is still necessary. Bad fathers make bad mothers, or at least they make it difficult for a mother to be and do all she would like to be and do.

Pores and Mind Open

"For one thing, the flapper of today does not wear corsets. She is athletic. She keeps her pores and her mind open. She does not take a pride in being ignorant. Children may not get born so often, but they live longer.

"The dear old-fashioned mother actually knew next to nothing about herself or her duty. She was proud of her ignorance. If she happened to know a thing or two, she pretended she didn't.

Same as Ever

"As a girl, she was just as wild and unreliable as the girls of today.

"Certain types of people have always feared and reviled youth. I am of the type that has always prized it.

"If youth should ever consent to accept the advice and control of its elders, the result would not be the millenium, but disaster. So let the flapper flap."

ESKIMOS LISTEN TO RADIO LECTURE

Keen to Learn That There Were No Devils Were Native of North

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 24. — Casting out fear of devils in minds of Eskimos is another feat of radio broadcasting.

Recently a sermon preached over KGO, General Electric Pacific Coast broadcaster, was picked up at Piolot Station School, on the lower Yukon, Alaska, where Eskimos were gathered around a loud speaker. "I don't believe there is such a thing as a devil," declared a preacher in San Francisco before a microphone in his pulpit. "When these words came out of our loud speaker in Alaska," said Inez Moore, teacher in the Piolot Station School in a letter to KGO, "you should have seen some of the Eskimos, who understand a little English, get up and move closer, eager to hear more welcome news. One of the awful fears of an Eskimo's life is that devils surround him day and night, particularly at night. At the door of every Eskimo's home there is a pan of water and a net; the net is to catch the devil, should he try to enter, and the water is to dampen his spirits if he misses the net."

"Our radio is such an attraction here," continued Mrs. Moore, "that our school room is full of natives every Sunday night."

MONTREAL, Aug. 24.—A complete revision of the tax lists at the city hall is asked for by the Montreal Trades and Labor Council, whose secretary, Gustave Francq, forwarded the following resolution to the executive committee.
