SPORT CHAT

The Whist League season will open tonight in St. Andrew's Hall when the St. Andrew's Society will meet the Knights of Pythias, the Moose, the Elks, and Oddfellows and Native Sons of Canada. The schedule for the Ladies' League will be published, it is expected, in a few days. While there may not be quite as many teams in competition this season, general interest promises to be undiminished.

Commenting favorably on the recent billiard rule where hazard runs are limited to 25 when a cannon must intervene, the London Times says editorially: The last thing that a game should do is to produce monotony. The new rule in billiards will have its effect, it is true, only among the best players; the majority of men who play at the club or at home do not attain to that dangerous pitch of efficiency that the new law seeks to circumvent. But they ought to be glad that the rule has been passed, because what happens in the highest circles has a way of working downwards, though it is perhaps less likely to do so in billiards than in some other games.

SEES PROSPERITY IN STORE FOR RUPERT AS RESULT DEVELOPMENTS

Walter S. Thompson, director of publicity for the Canadian National Railways with headquarters in Montreal, who was here yesterday, sees great changes in the city since he was here two years ago. He says Prince Rupert is now beginning to look like a real place. With the grain shipping, the natural development of the district and with the development of the fishing business, he says he thinks a period of prosperity is ahead of the city and the Canadian National Railways will contribute very largely to that end.

wholesale grocery store but in 1880 he again answered the call of railroading. Debs first came under the political searchlight in 1879, when he served as city clerk at Terre Haute, Ind., holding the position until 1883. In 1885 he was elected to the Indiana legislature.

LABOR ACTIVITIES
Debs opened his labor activities in 1880 when he was chosen grand secretary and treasurer of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and served until 1893. As president of the American Railway Union he directed and won a strike on the Great Northern Railway early in 1894, and in the same year while managing the strike of the western railroads, he was charged with conspiracy and was acquitted. This was the first time his name was in court records as a defendant. He served his first jail sentence at Woodstock, Ill., where he was held for six months on a contempt of court charge for violation of an injunction.

RAILWAY STRIKE
The American railway strike, which paralyzed traffic in the west, had been broken, however, by the intervention of President Cleveland, who ordered federal troops to guard the trains. Released from jail, Debs urged the workers to "sell your shovel and buy a gun" and announced he would consecrate his life to their emancipation. He became a Socialist lecturer, writer and organizer and travelled all over the United States. From that time on Debs, the Socialist, rallied round him all the strength the party could muster. In 1900, his first campaign for the presidential chair, he polled 87,814 votes; in 1912, 901,872; and in 1920 nearly 1,000,000. And so his popularity grew. Undaunted by a penitentiary sentence, the Socialist party nominated him as its standard bearer while he was a prisoner in the Federal peni-

I believe right to save myself from the penitentiary. I am accused of crime, but I look the court in the face, I look the jury in the face, I look the world in the face, for in my heart no accusation of wrong festers.

"Gentlemen, I have been accused of obstructing war. I admit it, gentlemen, I abhor war. I would oppose the war if I stood alone."

HELPED BY FRIENDS
Although Debs made no efforts to resist, penalty his friends rallied to his support and the fight to save him was carried to the United States supreme court, which, on March 10, 1918, upheld the conviction. He was taken to Moundsville on April 13, 1919, and a few months later was transferred to Atlanta, Ga.

Still in prison Debs made no efforts to obtain his release, but his friends worked unceasingly in his behalf. President Wilson on several occasions was petitioned to pardon Debs but refused on the ground that it would seriously affect the morale of the people. The last time such a petition was backed by an inquiry by the Department of Justice and a recommendation to the President by Attorney General Palmer that Debs be released on February 12, 1921, Lincoln's birthday. The president again, however, declined to grant the pardon.

RELEASED FROM PRISON
Debs' followers then pinned their hope on the Harding administration. Their leader finally was released from the penitentiary Christmas Day, 1921, his sentence having been commuted by President Harding along with those of 23 others convicted on various charges of having hindered the government during the war.

WAR OFFENSE
Debs' conviction came as the result of a speech he made at Canton, O., in 1918, in which he attacked the government's part in the war and assailed the terms of the Selective Service Act, under which the American army was being raised. He was found guilty in September, 1918, of trying to obstruct the draft and was sentenced by Federal Judge David C. Westenhaver to ten years in the Moundsville, W. Va., penitentiary. Debs made no effort to prevent the imposition of the penalty. John Brown of Ossawatimie, was his favorite exemplar. He offered no evidence in his own defense and made his own address to the jury, an address characteristic of his style, just a clear statement of the facts as he upheld them. To the jury he said: "I have no dispute with the evidence presented by the government; no criticism of the counsel for the prosecution. I would not take back a word of what incarceration or by illness. When the strike of railroad shophmen threatened to paralyze transportation in the summer of 1922, Debs was one of the first to issue a proclamation to the men, urging them to stand fast and stand together, as the future of their federation was at stake.

Rosy Cheeks for Every Child!

The food your children get today is building the foundation for their future success. Their physical development depends on the choice of proper growth foods. They must have simple, wholesome meals that supply an abundance of protein, the important tissue-building element.

School authorities and physicians stress the value of hot, nourishing breakfasts. Hot oats and milk are recommended as basic food for the morning meal.

Quaker Oats and milk—a cup of each—will furnish the child with 23% of his daily requirements of protein. They also supply carbohydrates, mineral salts and vitamins in balanced proportion.

If you would have rosy-cheeked boys and girls, who will become successful men and women, see that they have Quaker Oats and milk every morning.
