ARCHDEACON RIX ENTHUSES OVER BEAUTIES OF PRINCE RUPERT DISTRICT

Uproar in Commons on Use of Words in Debate

Objection to Premier King declaring statement untrue and later Donald Sutherland has to retract insinuation

OTTAWA, June 3.—An uproar was created in the House of Commons yesterday when the House was sitting as a committee of the whole. Discussing amendments to the Immigration Act, Premier Mackenzie King characterized the statement of Donald Sutherland, Conservative, that legislation before the House was the result of a bargain between Liberal and Labor members as "untrue."

Conservatives demanded that the word be withdrawn but Chairman Duff ruled that it was not unparliamentary and on appeal to the ruling of the chair was sustained. Mr. Sutherland then declared that he "wasn't surprised at the ruling of the chair" and Liberals strongly objected to the word "surprised." Chairman Duff ruled that the word be withdrawn and after considerable wrangling on both sides Mr. Sutherland retracted and calm again returned.

Unrivalled Scenic Attractions of Prince Rupert and District Pointed Out by Archdeacon Rix

That the scenic excellence of Prince Rupert is one of the greatest assets of the city, was the statement made by Archdeacon Rix in an address at the Rotary Club luncheon yesterday. The Archdeacon enthused over the possibilities of the district from that point of view and urged that more be made of it. People seemed to have no understanding of the beauties of the scenery here. Take the view from the American Consulate on Fourth Avenue. It was unrivalled. The harbor looms up from there and the scene is such as could be appreciated by anyone from any part of the world. There were the sunsets, the storms and calms, the boats coming and going, but best of all he liked the appearance of finished steel that was seen at times.

Prince Rupert as a townsite and wonderful scenic possibilities, the Archdeacon said. What was a flat town? It was suited for nothing but gardening. Here nature assisted to make the place beautiful. The overhanging bluffs were wonderful. The possibilities were beyond compare. He strongly urged that persistent and continuous efforts be made to beautify the city and to keep it neat and tidy and to improve its public gardens. So far little care had been taken of the townsite.

SITUATION IN EGYPT TENSE

Acquittal by Appeal Court of Assassins of Sir Lee Stack is Resented

WARSHIP AT ALEXANDRIA

British Presiding Judge Resigns as Protest Against Action of Natives

LONDON, June 3.—Great Britain has sent a note to the Egyptian government reserving "complete liberty of action" regarding the recent acquittal of six persons charged with assassinating Sir Lee Stack, British Sirdar of the Imperial army in 1924. A warship is being sent to Alexandria as a precautionary measure and Judge Felix Kerrshaw, British presiding judge of appeal court, which acquitted the men, has resigned as a protest against the action of the native judges in outvoting him to achieve what he terms a miscarriage of justice.

Sunken Gardens

The speaker drew special attention to the possibilities of a sunken garden at the "old hotel" site. There was the pond and the beautiful native trees and very little work was needed to make it a second Butchart Gardens. It had all the surroundings for a thing of beauty and would be a great attraction to tourists. One of the finest things the Rotary Club could do would be to make an adult playground here in rivalry to the children's playground of the Gyros. The place was infinitely ahead of other places in its possibilities.

Turning then to attractions outside of the city, the speaker referred to the possibilities of beautifying Kaien Island and opening it up. Stanley Park he thought, had nothing to compare with this island. Roads around and up the mountain should be built. The view from the mountain was equalled in few places.

Recreational trips outside of the city were to be found in every direction. There was the fishing and hunting of the district which could be capitalized. The Metlakatla Indian village could be made a show place and the wonderful scenery of the places easily reached by boat were worth a great deal. Later they would be appreciated, he felt sure. People, if they knew of it, would gladly pay any money to get there.

The Archdeacon then took his hearers on a trip to Skagway, Lake Bennett and Atlin Lake and showed pictures which he had collected both showing parts of Prince Rupert and the district. There were pictures of the malamutes and huskies and of various points of interest. Stewart and other Portland Canal points had splendid scenic attractions. Some day all these would be appreciated.
