PRINCE ALBERT IN LIMELIGHT

Was Made Known to World Through Rell Rebellion and Later by Power Plant Scheme

FOREIGN SETTLEMENTS

Sir Wilfrid Laurier Was Elected in District During Territorial Days

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask., Feb. 16.—The federal constituency of Prince Albert, where Premier W. L. Mackenzie King was elected yesterday, boasts of a novel past of political and historical interest.

A curious coincidence which has developed with the bye-election is that two of the major issues, which were injected into the brief campaign, were issues included in the Bill of Rights drawn up by Louis Riel, the denial of which is said to have precipitated the rebellion.

In Riel's bill was the following complaint: "That the Northwest has been denied the control of its natural resources; that the population had been denied direct communication with Europe via the Hudson Bay.

It was at the town of Prince Albert, that the Riel rebellion reached its climax. In 1885 when the smouldering resentment of the half-breeds broke into flame, Prince Albert was a town with a population of 700. Volunteers from the town were the first to engage the rebels in the battle of Duck Lake.

Historic Riding

The riding of Prince Albert is the most historic in Saskatchewan, and some claim possibly in the Canadian West. On the map of the riding are to be found such names as Batoche, Fish Creek, Frog Lake, and Duck Lake. It was at the latter point where Crozier issued his historic order "fire away boys" which resulted in a bloody encounter between the government forces and a company of rebels under the leadership of Gabriel Dumont, Riel's chief lieutenant.

The constituency of Prince Albert was considerably reduced in the last redistribution, being cut down in area by about two-thirds. The bulk of the population, however, is in the west end of the old riding, now the new riding of Prince Albert. It has a large foreign born population in the rural areas southwest of the city, and a strong French-Canadian settlement in the city itself. North of the North Saskatchewan River, there is an untenanted belt of sand about 20 miles wide, and beyond this a growing settlement was opened up by the soldier settlers in 1919-1920.

Derelict Power Plant

A huge power project about 1910 was planned to put Prince Albert more largely on the map, and the citizens spent about a million dollars to dam the North Saskatchewan River, east of the city. This power plant would have supplied light and power for half of Saskatchewan, but just as the project was well on its way to completion, the West was hit by a wave of depression and the work stopped. The bondholders still have half a huge power dam waiting for someone to come along with capital to complete the enterprise. The vast concrete works include a ship lock to accommodate the river steamers which might ply on the river and tentative plans for a pulp and paper plant to tap the northern forests were also drawn up.

In addition to the French Canadian population of Prince Albert, there are numerous French settlements southwest of the city, at St. Laurent, St. Louis, St. Isadore, Batoche, and St. Julien. Still farther southwest are the Galician settlements around Wakaw with other central European communities at Rosthern and Petroika. The Prince Albert community is largely made up of descendants of the British mounted police officers and the Scottish traders of the Hudson's Bay Company, and with the later immigration of the boom years after 1900, largely made up of settlers from the British Isles.

When the old Northwest territories were first given representation in the House of Commons in 1887, four electoral divisions were created. For the one in which the district of Prince Albert was included, the late Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, former premier of Canada was elected by a small majority in 1896. The new constituency of Prince Albert was established in 1906 and since that time has in turn been represented by a Liberal, Conservative, Progressive and Liberal.

Bronchitis More Than a Cold

Often develops rapidly into pneumonia—relief is found in Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine.

Any cold is serious enough when its dreadful possibilities are considered, but when there is soreness or tightness in the chest and a dry hard cough you can look for bronchitis, which is often confused with an ordinary cold.

It is usually known by aching limbs and body pains, chilly feelings, weariness and weakness, pain in the chest and a tight, tearing cough. Fever, dry skin, thirst, coated tongue and constipation are other symptoms.

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine seems almost like a specific for bronchitis because it is so successful in loosening up the cough, aiding expectoration and preventing the inflammation from reaching the lungs.

SPORT CHAT

With the bug for the game hitting the United States both east and west and the southern republic having the large gates of the big cities to draw the players across the line, there is danger that Canada may before long have to surrender first place in the hockey world that she has held for so many years. The game has caught the public fancy in New York, Pittsburg, and Boston this winter and next year there will probably be additional teams in Chicago, Detroit and Brooklyn. In the west league hockey has been organized for some time in Seattle and Portland. There is quite an outcry against what the Canadian hockey managers describe as syndicate hockey. There is nothing very new in this idea, however, for British Columbia through the Patrick brothers has been having syndicate hockey for several years. What Tex Rickard and his associates have been doing in New York this winter is exactly what the Patrick brothers were doing in British Columbia fifteen years ago.

The Prince George hockey team will figure for the first time this winter in the British Columbia championship under the Amateur Athletic Association. Later in the season they will play off with other intermediate teams of the province. For the purpose of playing off the intermediate teams have been placed in two groups. In the opening contest Merrill is scheduled to meet the champions of the C.P.R. main line league. The winners in this will meet the champions of the Okanagan league. The winners in the second contest will meet the Prince George team at some point on the main line of the C.P.R. or in the Okanagan. The date for this match has not been set but it is figured it will be on Saturday, February 20, or a day or two later. The champions of the coast will try out the winners of the event with Prince George at some point in the Okanagan or on the main line of the railway. In the second group the winners of the Greenwood-Grand Forks pair will play the winners of the Nelson-Rossland pair for the right to represent West Kootenay. Teams from Kimberly, Fernie and Cranbrook will play off with each other for the right to represent East Kootenay. The champions of West and East Kootenay will then play off, and the winners of the one groupwill then play off with the others.

Second place in the second division of the billiard league will be at stake in the tournament this evening between the Canadian Fish & Cold Storage and Grotto teams. The position is now held by the Cold Storage but only by a rather narrow margin. The teams will meet as follows:

W. Long (Cold Storage) vs. J Hillman (Grotto) 8.30 p.m. at Great War Veterans.

A. MacDonald vs. J. Beesley 8:30 p.m. at Prince Rupert Billiard Parlor.

A. Harvey vs. Bert Morgan 3 p.m. at Prince Rupert Billiard Parlor.

J. May vs. G. Howe 7.30 p.m at Prince Rupert Billiard Parlor

H. Parr vs. J. McLean 7.30 p.m. at Great War Veterans.
