STREET PARADE OF BOYS' BAND

Free Open Air Concert to be Given Saturday Evening Before Rotary Concert

At the weekly luncheon of the Rotary Club yesterday afternoon Wallace Orchard reported that a concert was to be put on for the benefit of the boys' band on April 11 and that it was planned to have a band parade the previous Saturday evening with a group of ticket sellers on the street to make as much money as possible for the worthy purpose. The band will give a concert on the streets at that time.

Colonel McMorris has offered several prizes to the boy selling most tickets for the concert. It is expected to fill the theatre to overflowing partly on account of the excellence of the performance which it is proposed to give and partly because of the good cause for which it is put on.

CHINESE INDUSTRY RUINED BY BOBBED HAIR LARGE NUMBERS

PEKIN, March 19.—As a result of the popularity of bobbed hair with western women, 16,700 out of 18,100 Chinese women formerly engaged in making of hair nets in Chefoo are dependent on charity. The figures were made known by John Lee, comptroller of a telegraph company in China.

President William T. Cosgrove of the Free State Cabinet said: "I am well satisfied with the results of the London Agreement and with the friendly relations between the governments which it has facilitated. The result has been beneficial all around."

In Belfast, Sir James Craig, Premier of the Ulster government, while carefully avoiding reference to the possibility of union, stressed the cooperative aspect of their new relations. He characterized them as "two neighbors who are friendly, who wish to oblige each other and thus effect economies."

"North and South Ireland stand side by side as neighbors," said the Ulster leader. "Both administrations must turn their minds from those matters which have divided them in the past and concentrate on affairs that really effect the welfare of the people, so that the whole of Ireland, and not one part alone, may be prosperous."

Cardinal Patrick O'Donnell, Archbishop of Armagh, saw a prospect of union. "It seems to me reasonable to infer that the success which the Northern Government has had over the boundary question and the satisfaction resulting therefrom, will leave a situation in which the Northern Unionists may more readily consider the advantages of Irish unity later on," he declared.

And Joseph Devlin, leader of the Ulster Nationalists, that party which has had over the boundary question and the satisfaction resulting therefrom, will leave a situation in which the Northern Unionists may more readily consider the advantages of Irish unity later on," he declared.

CONDITION IN IRELAND VERY MUCH BETTER

Settlement of Boundary Dispute Ushers in Period of Friendliness on Both Sides

LONDON, Mar. 19.—The new Irish Boundary Agreement has ushered in a new era, characterized by the friendliness and cooperation shown by the two Irish governments in relations with each other and the Imperial Cabinet in London.

This was the consensus of a canvass by The Associated Press and the heads of the Dublin and Belfast governments and other leaders of both states, some of whom even spoke hopefully of the prospect of eventual union of all Ireland. The agreement has been in operation nearly three months.

President William T. Cosgrove of the Free State Cabinet said: "I am well satisfied with the results of the London Agreement and with the friendly relations between the governments which it has facilitated. The result has been beneficial all around."

In Belfast, Sir James Craig, Premier of the Ulster government, while carefully avoiding reference to the possibility of union, stressed the cooperative aspect of their new relations. He characterized them as "two neighbors who are friendly, who wish to oblige each other and thus effect economies."

The Blue Ribbon Family comprises more than half of the entire population of Western Canada. It is an enthusiastic family and adds many to its membership every day.

In the North which hopes for the union of all Ireland, told his followers: "The proper way to bring about unity is not by fighting for it. Ulster cannot be coerced into unity with the rest of Ireland by force. The only real union can be brought about by allowing the old passions to die and by depending less upon shibboleths and more on charity and good will."

A survey of official and other authoritative opinion on both sides of the border showed a prevalent belief that what has happened in Ireland can best be illustrated by two Februaries, a contrast of the reigning peace with the terrible days of 1922, when no man's life seemed safe on either side of the disputed border. In February, 1922, the Ulster border was literally ringed with steel; thousands of Ulster special police were mobilized; raiders from the south had penetrated Ulster and seized hostages; Ireland south of the border was a sealed book to those who lived in Ulster.

February, 1926, found normal and cordial relations between Dublin and Belfast, and with London. Sir James Craig's advice, that North and South should turn their minds from those matters which have divided them, is being followed. The North has reduced its costly police force. There has been a speedy release of political prisoners. The London Agreement, by abolishing the abortive Council of Ireland, which was most irksome to Ulster, has substituted friendly cooperation.

WINNIPEG, March 19.—Aiming at the reclamation of former prison inmates, an organization to be known as the "Prison Gate Association," was recently formed here, at the instance of T. O. Wood, organizer of the Western Prison League. An advisory council was appointed, consisting of a number of churchmen and social workers. A small group of former convicts enrolled as members.

In urging the public to support the movement, Mr. Wood declared that punishment started when a person left prison. "It is not by choice that an individual goes back to jail," he said. "It is as much a crime as robbery, to force these unfortunates back behind prison bars. There are as good men in jail as out of it, but those who have once run foul of the law and been branded with the stigma of prison sentence, have not much of a chance to reestablish themselves. "Give the ex-convict a chance," he urged. Mr. Wood added that the general public was inclined to sidetrack its responsibilities and were loathe to ignore the pleas of those who sought to go right.

Efforts will be made to organize similar bodies in other cities of the Canadian West.

HONOLULU, March 18.—Pele, goddess of fire, who in Hawaiian mythology controls Kilauea volcano on this island, has been seen twice of late, say believers in the superstition.

Many are the Hawaiians who think the "appearance" of the goddess presages a lava flow or eruption and is meant as a warning. Kilauea has been inactive since late spring of 1924.

Before the volcanic outbreaks of 1907, 1916, and 1919 an unidentified old woman, presumably Pele, was supposed to have been abroad and the eruptions due to her influence.

An aura behind the reappearance of the fateful goddess has been constructed in the tales now being told by the natives. A Japanese was driving in the Kona district when he noticed an old woman sitting by the side of the road. As he passed her the engine of his machine stopped and he was unable to start it. A second, third and fourth automobile came up and likewise stopped.

The driver of the fourth car, however, was more polite and offered the elderly creature a lift. She accepted, climbing into the ack seat. Then without difficulty the driver was able to start his engine and he passed the other cars which soon thereafter were able to move again. A little later the polite driver turned in his seat to speak to his passenger but the car was empty. Thus do the natives find corroboration for the reported first appearance of Pele.

With the abolition of government sinecures under the republic, and the loss of fortunes after the recent chain of wars, many Turks of good family have been forced to set to work. Moreover, such is the changed spirit of the times, that many more—particularly among the women—have taken jobs not because of financial need, but through a growing distaste for idleness.

CONSTANTINOPLE, March 19.—Turkish society women by their own example are helping to destroy the doctrine of the old Turkey that toil is undignified. Under the Empire work was considered degrading for men of good family and unthinkable for women.

The capacity of the reservoir to be created is about 75 thousand acre feet and will flood about 5,800 acres of land. The water will be diverted from the stream at a point about the location of the storage-dam, namely the outlet of Ain Lake, and will be used for Power and Industrial purposes upon the land described as Lot 1424, Queen Charlotte Islands District. This notice was posted on the ground on the 19th day of February, 1926. A copy of this notice and an application pursuant thereto and to the "Water Act, 1914," will be filed in the office of the Water Recorder at Prince Rupert, B.C. The date of the first publication of this notice is February 23, 1926.
