CHAPLIN HERE IN A COMEDY

'The Gold Rush' Said to be a Real Rib-Tickler Story of Klondike Country

An artistic genius and a sense of humor that can convert tears and heartaches into joy and laughter...

But this is just what Charlie Chaplin does in his new film comedy, 'The Gold Rush'...

Out of a situation where a half-starved wanderer throws himself into a self-enforced faint at the door of a gold prospector's cabin...

'The Gold Rush' deals with the stampe into the Klondike, and Chaplin has cast himself in the role of a tenderfoot and lone prospector...

There are tears and laughter, too, when Charlie is the wrong recipient of an endearing note of apology written to his rival by the girl whom he adores...

Again Charlie's all important love affair is rudely interrupted by Big Jim McKay whose one and only interest in life is the search for gold...

'There is a laugh in every one of the nearly nine thousand feet of film in 'The Gold Rush'...

DISASTER FOLLOWS ACCESSION TO WEALTH

'Just a Woman' is One Day Film Here Tells of Steel Mills and New York Rendezvous
