London is Riding Once More Following Strike

Legal action may likely follow unconstitutional action of union executive in unlawfully expending funds

LONDON, May 15.—Among individual trades unions the aftermath of the general strike promises to be serious and far reaching. Groups of members of several unions already contemplate appealing to the law courts against the course of their executives in embarking on a strike unconstitutionally and thus expending the union funds unlawfully.

LONDON, May 15. — John Bull having first had a good to relieve his surplus energy went back to work today with , although a somewhat rueful one. John's offspring did not this morning as he had been doing for the past eleven while the head of the family was having his scrap. There are still individual unions in various parts of the country which have not yet settled their differences with employers and it may be some time before everything is righted, the railways being one of the principal sufferers in this respect.

Some of the dock workers are remaining out pending adjustment of the coal miners' dispute. Broadly speaking, however, the authorities took an optimistic view of the situation, even the miners' troubles promising to be solved, according to the unofficial expressions of some of the miners' delegates.

The big steel and other industries dependent upon coal will encounter more difficulties than most other concerns in getting under way.

Hope is expressed that negotiations for resumption of work by dockers and transport men, whose positions are still unsettled, will lead to a satisfactory agreement during the week-end.

Mutual Courtesies Exchanged When Visitors Took Departure Southward

An enthusiastic send-off was given the potentates and nobles of Gizeh Shrine Temple just before they sailed at 3.30 this morning on board the steamer Prince Rupert returning to Vancouver and Victoria.

At the conclusion of the ball in the Exhibition Hall, the big party of visitors proceeded to the wharf accompanied by a large gathering of local Shriners and their wives. There was community singing accompanied by the band and James W. Hudson, potentate of Gizeh Temple, spoke extolling the local committees for the excellence of the arrangements that had been made for the visit and the smooth manner in which they had been carried out. In his experience, he said, he had never seen a ceremonial carried ou in better style than at Prince Rupert. Courtesies and hospitality had been extended not only by the Prince Rupert nobles but by the public generally and the whole delegation was greatly appreciative.

R. V. G. Le Pine, chairman of the local committee, in replying, expressed the pleasure that it had been to have a ceremonial in Prince Rupert. It was to be hoped that the time would not be too far removed when there might be such another pilgrimage as that which was now drawing to a close.

Cheers were exchanged from wharf to steamer and back again as the vessel pulled away from her berth, the band set up the playing of "Auld Lang Syne, and the strains of "The End of a Perfect Day" sounded over the waters as the Prince Rupert moved out into the darkness of the harbor bringing to a close a visitation that had been as successful as it had been momentous.
