Books About Russia Are in Demand.

Books about Russia are much in demand these days and especially interesting are those by Dr. Ossendowsky. When "Beasts, Men and Gods" appeared a little over a year ago it was much in demand and those who read it were looking for the next. It came in "The Shadow of the Gloomy East," a series of intimate sketches of life in Russia as it was at about the time of the revolution.

Dr. Ossendowsky, who spent many years in the country and studied the life of the people carefully, tells of the village life, court life, the witchcraft, superstition, queer religious ideas, heathenism as he found it. He recounts how he met on three occasions the monk Rasputin, the last time just when his body was taken out of the river whence it had been thrust by his murderers.

Sketches of the statesmen and their work, of the rescue for the spread of Bolshevism, of the helplessness of the socialists, these all give an insight into the cataclysm which followed. The gloomy picture he sums up in the following comprehensive sentence:

"Disregard and ill-treatment of their womenfolk, be it mothers or wives, decline of family morality, political avidity, lack of social cohesion, the gulf between the educated classes and the common people, extremes of democracy in the form of either spiritual idealism or meanest vulgarity, the overgrowth of class hatred, the lust of murder and spoliation, indifference in regard to religious principles or their utter unreality, superstitions, remnants of thirteenth or fourteenth century culture, servility and social immorality—these are the inverse aspects of the East which has outlived itself."

Religion And Sorcery Neighbors.

Telling of the curious habits of the people of the villages the writer of the book says:

"In close neighborhood with leaders of religion and education nearby in some similar room live the wizards, sorcerers and hags. They are the survival of primordial paganism. Their traditional school has been preserved and their prescriptions, having lived through centuries, are handed down from generation to generation."

"The sorcerers are generally old people who possess the secret science of curing men and animals of diseases, of appearing the house-demon whenever he gets into too great a fury, of stanching blood, freeing insect-infested houses of vermin, cleansing the vapor baths—standing outside the village—of devils, who chose them as their abode, haunting the people; of tracking horse thieves; of invoking the souls of the dead; of foretelling the future; of discovering treasures hidden underground and similar black arts. In reality the wizard or the witch has a good knowledge of botany, and through the dark pages of the history of the Russian village runs the sinister trail of the crimes of poisoning."

Lives Of Women In The Villages.

"In the villages the life of the peasant woman is one long round of cruel treatment at the hands of a drunken or savage husband, who uses infamous and disgraceful language and thrashes her almost to death. The children lose respect for their mother, they deny her all moral authority, and when they grow up they begin to insult and beat her, forgetting that all her life she was thrashed like a dog by the father, the head of the family, the lord and master."

The pictures the writer draws are often horrible yet they are so artistically drawn that they fascinate.

GAME CLUB TO BE ORGANIZED

Backers Feel That Much Good Work Could Be Done Here by Such an Institution

A movement is on foot for the establishment here of a sportsmen's association or rod and gun club and, with the organizers already having approached some seventy or eighty interested citizens who are heartily in sympathy with the proposal, it is likely that a meeting will be called in the near future to complete the organization.

Those interested in the project realize that with such an organization much could be accomplished, particularly in dealing with the government, where individual effort would fail. One of the main immediate objects of such a body would be to have re-adjustments made in the open season for game birds. It is felt that the season for the district as it stands at present opens and closes too soon. For six weeks after the opening, there are practically no birds and six weeks after it closes the hunting is good. Instead of the open season being as it is at present from September 15 to December 26, it is proposed to ask that it be changed to from October 15 to January 15.

Another matter which a local game club could take up would be that of restocking neighboring streams and lakes, which are now becoming depleted, with game fish. The government has the fry available and it is felt that all that is necessary for this district to get its share is pressure from some responsible local organization.

THE MAN IN THE MOON

MONEY talks. When it talks to me it says "NO."

IN RUSSIA if a doctor fails to cure you, the correct thing is to kill him. That method saves expense.

WHAT I don't like about this winter has been that I could not change off into my thick underclothes. Never mind, better luck next year.

THE skates are still hanging on the nail and will be able to take on another coat of rust before next year.

THE skates are hanging on the wall.

The snowshoes stand beside, we looked in vain for snow and ice.

To clothe the mountain side, now we must wait another year. And dream most longingly, for snowflakes covering all the land Far as eye can see.

LIBRARY BOARD PRESENTS CASE

Large Delegation Appears Before Council to Ask that Estimates be Passed in Full

A large delegation of members of the Library Board, Trades & Labor Council and various church, public service and fraternal organizations appeared before the city council last night to urge that the 1926 estimates of the Library Board be granted in full by the council in making its appropriations for the year. The spokesmen of the delegation were G. V. Wilkinson, secretary of the Library Board, and S. W. Taylor, president of the Gyro Club. Others who appeared in support of the cause were Mrs. James Clarke, Rev. Walter Allen, James Black, Mrs. R. L. McIntosh, James L. Brewster, Principal and Mrs. Brady, Miss Alice Cruikshank, B. J. Bacon, J. S. Irvine, A. J. Prudhomme, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Kirkpatrick, J. J. Gillis, Mrs. Wallace, C. Orchard, Mrs. R. Blance, Mrs. S. Darton, Mrs. W. T. Keggan, J. H. Thompson, H. F. Pullen, Mrs. Atack, Miss Laxton, J. Featherstonehaugh and others.

In speaking on behalf of the library board, G. V. Wilkinson stated that the affairs of the library had reached a critical period. There was an insistent demand for new books and considerable repairs and replacements had become necessary. In view of this, the city was being asked to pass the estimates this year in full and discontinue the policy that had been followed in the past of consistently cutting the library's estimates. The policy of the library board had been to ask for the minimum appropriations and never had any extravagant requests been made.

Essential Factor

The library, Mr. Wilkinson said, had become an essential factor in the life of the community and its membership was steadily increasing. There had been 124 new members enrolled in a single month since the first of this year and the membership to date stood at 2,222, representing one third of the city's population. There were at present 4,500 books in the library and the large majority of these were in practically constant use. The board, which was asking this year for the passage of an appropriation of $1,900, $1,500 to be used in the purchase of new books and $400 for rebounding after having utilized all other means to make the library a success, was now at the end of its resources and greater support from the city was absolutely necessary.

The speaker asked the aldermen to take a greater interest in the affairs of the library and personally visit the premises so that they might see how badly the money was needed and to what a great extent the library was being used by the public. In one day, 390 books had been issued, meaning that on that day a book had been given out for every minute the library was open. Mr. Wilkinson closed his remarks by pointing out that foremost in public opinion was behind the request of the library board, the size of the delegation in attendance testifying to that.

S. W. Taylor

S. W. Taylor pointed out that the present 4,000 books was not a very large collection when it was realized that the library had over 2,000 subscribers. If books were not renewed and new ones

She Was Troubled With Chronic Constipation

Once your bowels become constipated you are in for a lot of trouble, as constipation is one of the most prolific sources of disease that the human race is subjected to, therefore a free motion of the bowels every day should be the aim of everyone who aspires to perfect health.

Mrs. O. W. Lawrence, Cloverdale, East, N.B., writes:—"I was troubled with chronic constipation, and became so bad I was almost afraid to eat anything."

One day I saw your advertisement of

Milburn's

so I got three vials, and after taking them I have never been troubled since with constipation."
