"Baby" combs are in great demand in London's Bond Street. Society women have found that frequent washing of shingled hair turns it gray, and hair combed with the fine-toothed combs bearing the stamp "Baby" can be kept so clean that it requires little washing A final rub with silk gives the hair a finer gloss than a brushing and large handkerchiefs for this purpose are offered by tollet specialists. These fine baby combs are kept clean by slipping them through hanks of horsehair.
