"BLIND GODDESS" PACKS POWERFUL DRAMATIC PUNCH

Capital Acting and Shrewd Direction Make New Film Vivid Human Document

A picture of tense drama, gripping power and emotional depth was disclosed last night when "The Blind Goddess" made its local bow at the Westholme Theatre. This is Paramount's celluloid version of Arthur Train's famous novel. It may be said that the film is a graphic, vital portrayal of Mr. Train's widely read and much discussed story.

The plot as it unfolds on the screen concerns the romance of a young prosecuting attorney and the daughter of a powerful political New York boss. When the politician is found murdered, and the police arrest the woman last seen with him, the lawyer-lover finds himself torn twixt love and duty. His fiancee naturally demands that he prosecute the murderer of her father; his high ideals of duty urge him to resign his position and defend the accused woman, of whose innocence he becomes convinced. He decides on the latter course.

The exciting developments that follow leading up to the sensational trial, the courtroom scenes showing the grim routine of the criminal law and its effort to convict on purely circumstantial evidence, the unexpected discovery of the actual murderer, the startling denouement as to the real identity of the woman and the final joyous reconciliation make up a photoplay that is completely satisfying and decidedly above the average in screen entertainment.

COMMITTEE TO MAKE ARRANGEMENTS FOR TRIP TO EDMONTON

The invitation from the Edmonton Board of Trade for members of the local Board of Trade and citizens of Prince Rupert to pay a return visit to the Alberta capital on a convenient date was referred at last night's meeting of the board by President Hanson to a committee consisting of W.
