OUTHRIE TOO OLD FOR PERMANENT LEADER.

The selection of Hugh Guthrie as Conservative leader seems to have been Union Acts with relation to the contria compromise. He can hardly be looked upon seriously as permanent leader of bution to and the disposal of the polithe party. When a man reaches sixty years of age he is too old to begin a life tical funds of the union. work. It will be four years or more probably before he will have an opportunity to lead his party through an election campaign and then, should be be successful, the real work is only commencing. He is at the beginning of a five year term

A man of about forty should be chosen for a position of that kind. Then if he is beaten he has time to come back. Mackenzie King was a young man and is still young and virile. The Conservative leader should not be much older than King.

Of course it is the business of the Conservatives to choose whom they wish. No Liberal has a right to say, but all citizens of Canada are interested in the kind of man who is likely some day to become premier.

SIMILAR CONDITION PROVINCIAL POLITICS.

In the provincial field there is a somewhat similar condition. Pooley has youth on his side but that is all. There is little else to commend him as leader although he is a fine man in his own exclusive set. Provincial Conservatives are beginning to see the futility of hoping to succeed without a real leader and they have been scouring the country for a man, but so far without success. The probability is they all will go back to W. J. Bowser, who has brains and force, whatever else may be said of him.

NEW WEEKLY FOR NORTH VANCOUVER.

North Vancouver has a new weekly newspaper. The Review is above the average of the small town weekly, takes on city airs and is edited undoubtedly by a newspaperman.

The province is covered with graves of unsuccessful newspapers and some was attached. Eventually the following of them have taken their publishers to the grave with them. However, there is constitution and rules were adopted:a good opportunity for a paper on the north shore of Burrard Inlet and the Review should succeed. A well edited newspaper is worth a lot to any community and "The Review" starts out well. We shall watch its career with great interest.

HAVE YOU A BANK BALANCE TODAY?

Have you a bank balance today? If you have not, this is the time to ency Liberal Association. start one. We have no plea for the banks. Some of them do not even advertise their services but we believe in banks and particularly in having a balance on the right side of the ledger.

A lot of people are contantly harping about safety first. Safety in finances is a good thing. Nothing brings so much satisfaction as the feeling of independence consequent on having a good fat bank balance.

No matter how much the earnings, a small amount put by each week or each month is a great asset as well as a test of character. Money put away very soon begins to work for its owner and the first thing he knows he is on the way to a competency. It is so easy once it is started with an object in view. levy.

Some people save money in order that they may have a good blowout when they have accumulated sufficient. That is a foolish thing to do. Put away a little each month and you attain a position of independence and power that cannot otherwise be reached.

Saying is not a virtue. The person who saves is not any better than members of Parliament in oredr that the person who spends but under present conditions he is wiser and is likelier matters affecting trade unionists may be to end his days in peace. The difficulty is in beginning. After that it is easy, effectively brought before Parliament.

UNION OF NORTH AND SOUTH IRELAND.

The movement for the reunion of Ireland may be said to have begun at the moment of partition, says the Manchester Guardian. It seemed even then a thing inevitable, though very far away. It does not look quite so distant today. Opinion in Ireland forms quickly, and there have been many signs lately of a recognition of the essential unity of Ireland, North and South. The hardly fledged party of which Captain Redmond is the head has not declared its policy very definitely, but it is, of course, already making bids for popular support and it evidently feels that one way of doing that is to criticise partition. Dr. Andrew Fullerton, of Belfast, at a recent dinner of the College of Surgeons in Dublin, said he thought that was the first occasion on which the toast of the "Prosperity of Ireland" had been proposed in the Free State by a Northerner. That ,perhaps, was not in itself a great augury, but Dr. Fullerton was justified in making it the viewpoint for a long forward look to the time when the border should have disappeared.

3 .- That owing to the lack of combination it has often been difficult. not impossible, to make operative many BIOGRAPHY AND HISTORY of the safeguarding clauses of the Trade

While there is no intention to set up any rival trade union or interfere in any way with the legitimate working of established trade unions it is desirable and, indeed, necessary to create a organisation to overcome the difficulties liberal trade unionists should therefore be established.

This memorandum was unanimously and enthusiastically adopted. The chairman of the conference was J. A Spender, president of the National Liberal Federation. The conference was, in fact, held under the joint auspices of the Federation and of the Liberal and Radical Candidates' Association.

A draft constitution and rules were submitted by the Committee and adopt ed with very slight modifications. It was decided to call the organization "The National League of Liberal Trade Unionists," and to confine it entirely to members of trade unions. There was some difference of opinion among delegates on the question of the political levy. The delegates from Wales wished to enable (presumably by legislation) any member of a trade union to earmark his subscription to the political levy for the party to which

2 .- There shall be a district organisation for each District Liberal Federation area in England and Wales, to which should be affiliated the constituency groups within the district.

3.—There shall be a national organisation which for national purposes should unite all the district organisations and thus speak both for them and for their constituent parts.

CROP TO BE BIGGER THAN WAS EXPECTED

EDMONTON, Oct. 13 .- Optimistic over agricultural conditions in Alberta and with the prospects of a better rop than anticipated, Hon. George Hoadley, minister of agriculture returned to the city from a trip to Calgary and surrounding territory.

"From all available information," said Hon. Mr. Hoadley, "I am convinced that we will have a bigger crop that at first estimated and one which will closely approximate the estimate of 113,000,000 bushels made by the Dominion Government. However, it is impossible to tell exactly what size the crop will be until it is threshed and in the elevators."
