Time Prince Rupert Showed Her Teeth.

The Mayor of Vancouver is objecting to Prince Rupert getting some advantage from the leasing of the elevator and is protesting to Ottawa. He is the official head of the city and his action is bound to be taken as official.

Is it not about time Prince Rupert was having something to say! Vancouver lives off this little city. Almost all the business that is done here goes to Vancouver. Most of the money we earn goes there. Practically all the proceeds of the salmon fisheries goes there. Vancouver has preferential rates for almost everything because it is a big city, and then it tries to stifle all the small places.

Boycott On Goods Is Only Remedy.

The only way to bring Vancouver people to their senses is to place a boycott on Vancouver goods. Let us buy from Edmonton and Seattle if Vancouver cannot give us a square deal. Why this eternal nagging! Are we not always getting the worst end of it and then because we score once, the mayor of Vancouver has to make a public and formal protest against it.

It seems as if this would be a good chance for the Board of Trade to call a meeting and make a real protest. Also it might be wise to query the mayor if he is correctly reported so as to let him know we are on the job.

Once Prince Rupert used a trade boycott with good effect and it might easily be used again. We have to agree in regard to it and make it unanimous. Then it will be for the businessmen of Vancouver to call on their mayor and see that the smaller places get proper treatment.

Another Case Is Islands Service.

The service to the Queen Charlotte Islands is a case where Vancouver has scored very heavily. It seems to have been arranged by those in close touch with Vancouver needs. We get it in the neck every time and we take these things too quietly. The Board of Trade is to be congratulated on taking quick action in regard to the Islands service. The next thing is the protest of Mayor Taylor.

Value Of Rupert To Ketchikan.

The interests of Prince Rupert and Ketchikan ought to be closely allied. We ought to be able to make progress side by side without either trying to stick a knife into the other. Both places are at present fairly prosperous and there is no need to try to get ahead of the other except in fair and open rivalry which is just and lawful and honorable. The fishermen of Alaska find it a good thing to market their fish here but the businessmen try to keep them from coming here. As long as they use open and fair trade methods all is well, but when they try to place us at a disadvantage we naturally make a protest.

Just now we are under a disadvantage to the extent of two cents a pound duty and the Ketchikan interests would go further and shut the fishermen out altogether. Also there are some Canadians who would shut out the American boats. What we would like to see would be an open and fair market to all either at Ketchikan or Prince Rupert. Then the fishermen would get proper return for their efforts and nobody would be hurt.

Solidarity Of Government Forces.

The Dominion Government is showing considerable solidarity. As a matter of fact the government supporters are sticking together better than the opposition. There are forces at work trying to drive the Conservative leader from his position, although not with any great measure of success. Mr. Meighen will not be driven out. This inside rebellion is a weakening force, however, and does not make for good government. It dampens the enthusiasm of the opposition and encourages the non-Liberals to continue their support of the group in power.

Liberals naturally welcome anything which helps keep them together. We try to look at the matter from a public service point of view rather than from that of party. We believe that it is best for either group to be strong enough to control the House of Commons. We do not altogether like the present situation although we must admit that Prince Rupert could not have been better served than she has, even with a strong Liberal group in control. Happily, the interest of the prairie farmers and the western ports are similar in many respects.

LADY BYNG IS AFTER FLOWERS

Made Incursions Into the Wilds of Vancouver Island and Other Places on Visit

VICTORIA, May 21. — Lady Byng, who with the Governor-General has recently been visiting on Vancouver Island, has been taking advantage of various opportunities to search for new plants and has made quite a collection. The woods of Vancouver Island provided a number of specimens hitherto new to the distinguished English visitor. Telling of her rambles, Lady Byng says:

Tells About Rambles

"Canadians, who are the kindest people in the world, and the most hospitable, realizing my craze, have wherever possible helped me to attain my dreams of grubbing in the wilds. Armed with spades, forks and other gardening impedimenta, off we go, my secretary, a luckless A.D.C., and I, into the woods across the prairies, to seek for treasures that will eventually be housed in wooden boxes filled with various kinds of soil, that form my 'garden' in one of the baggage wagons, where they remain, either till they have dried down enough to send home, or till we reach Government House, where they are grown on. The windows of the observation car also play a useful part, and to the curiosity of station crowds are hung with muslin bags of ripening seeds, so that I sometimes wonder if the people who see these bags think them part of the gubernatorial laundry."

SPEAKERS AT ROTARY CLUB

At the Rotary Club luncheon yesterday Lyman Trumbull of the advisory committee of Rotary International was present and spoke briefly on the work in other places.

Walter Fisher, delegate to the district conference at Victoria, reviewed the work of that conference. He told the people there of the organization of the Boy's Band here and they were much pleased to hear of its success.

Thomas McClymont, past president, told of the progress during the past year, reviewing some of the activities of the club.

TOREADOR DANCE IS LATEST INVENTION

Said to be Already Popular in London and Paris and is Picnic After Charleston

A new dance, inspired from the movements of the toreador, has arrived.

It is already so popular in London as well as Paris, that it looks as though the fox trot may retire, disgruntled.

It is a new variation of the Paso Doble, slower in movement and easier to learn. It is claimed that anyone can dance it correctly after one lesson.

To demonstrate it the teacher holds a tablecloth in his hands as though it was the toreador's cloak. In any West End dancing academy, says The London Mirror, you may hear something like this coming from the teacher:

"I know it isn't frightfully complimentary to your partner, but please imagine you are confronted by an angry bull. The first movement is a kind of promenade two-step — that's the toreador entering the arena."

Now a little delicate footwork from left to right, as though he was looking this way and that over his shoulder at the bull—and really that is all."

"It is one of the easiest and prettiest dances we have ever had," Mr. McKenzie, the dancing expert said. "People didn't like it before because it was a very quick-time dance, now it is much slower, graceful, and really fascinating. Besides, it is so easy—quite a picnic after the Charleston."

ADAPTATION.

Life is for most of us a continuous process of getting used to things we had not expected.

COLLEEN MOORE IN "IRENE" WONDERFUL IN LATEST FASHIONS

Dazzling Tableaux and Diversified Costumes in Picture Showing Tonight

Captivating Colleen Moore, who is the screen's grand exponent of the modern homespun heroine, blossoms forth as one of the most gorgeously attired beauties in the movies in her latest First National picture, "Irene," taken from the famous musical comedy and shown here tonight.

In this picture the gay little black-haired star sports a wardrobe that would make many princesses pale with envy, according to advance reports. Paris modistes who have gotten a sight of the costumes worn by Miss Moore in "Irene" are said to have conceded the fashion scepter to her.

All the magnificent gowns and frocks which adorn Miss Moore and a troupe of beautiful Hollywood mannequins, who appear in the climax of the picture, a fashion lawn fete screened in the natural colors, are all-American made. Cora Magrath, who glorified the costumes of Flo Ziegfeld's "Follies," is responsible for the designing of the "Irene" gowns.

Dazzling Tableaux

Miss Moore appears in dazzling and dizzying diversified costumes against a series of tableaux representing the seasons and topped off with a farce. Twenty-four of the prettiest types of femininity Hollywood was able to supply were picked for this series of seasonal backgrounds, six appearing in each of the four transformations.

Incidental to these, as satellites around a sun, appeared groups and individuals ravishingly attired as the Pond Lillies, the Bandbox Girls and attendants, the Spirit of the Fashion, in glittering silver cloth and helmet, surmounted by a towering blood-red plume, with Blackamour attendants to manage the serpentine trail of the gown.

Beautiful Beyond Words

As to the star's costumes, they are reported to be beyond words. Her "motif" gown, quite in accordance with the entrancing score of the musical comedy on which the screen play is based, is an "Alice blue" gown—the first fine dress ever to gladden the heart of the heroine. It is fashioned of taffeta and soft silks, adorned with "rosebud" pockets, and buttons down the back.

At the whippet races, as shown in the picture, Colleen wears a severe black and white outfit—black satin and white velvet—and carries a parasol trimmed with black monkey fur.

THE MAN IN THE MOON

says:

"I'll teach you to kiss my daughter," said Dad, but he was too late. Jack had already learned.

EVEN if the body is made of dirt, the mind should be clean.

THE BIBLE is the best selling book, but think how popular it would become if someone would only try to suppress it.

THE old folks are always talking about the decadence of the race and how different the young people are today, but how can they say anything. See what they came to.

WHEN giving a party the first thing to do is to borrow the neighbor's silverware.

AFTER a very long engagement most young couple decide it is hardly worth while to marry.
