

MOOSE WINNERS FOOTBALL GAME

Cold Storage Had Best of Play in Second Half but Were Beaten by Rivals

MOOSE 4, COLD STORAGE 3

Last night's Stuart Benefit Shield football game between the Storage and Moose was rather spoiled by the inclement weather, quite a part of the game being played with rain falling heavily. Under the conditions good football could not be expected as the ball was exceptionally hard to control. The Storage had the advantage of the grade in the first half but the Moose were the first to secure a point, S. Currie converting a penalty kick. Hodgkinson added a second point shortly afterwards. Erskine got the only point for the Storage from a spot kick and the teams turned over with the score standing two to one in favor of the Moose.

The Storage had easily the best of exchanges in the second half and Macdonald put his side on even terms while a few minutes afterwards, the same player added number three for the Storage. After a spell of even play, Tinker, on a breakaway, put the teams even again and Russel, who had been extremely weak on the Moose right wing, took advantage of a defence mistake and gave his team the lead, which they held to the end. Although the Moose won by four goals to three, the Storage should, at least have secured a point, but if they are to achieve the results expected of them, a little more team spirit will have to be shown.

Team: Storage — Murray; Haig and Lambe; Harris, Kelsey and Doherty; Carlson, Macdonald, Erskine, Johnson and Norrington.

Moose — Gathorn; J. Currie and Mack; Mitchell, S. Currie and Skinner; Russell, White, Tinker, Hodgkinson and Black.

Referee—G. S. Russell; linesmen—H. Worsfold and A. Glaperton.

There was a good attendance of spectators.

Lancashire's footballers, whose struggle at Wembley made the excuse for the festival, played a game that has been highly and deservedly praised. Cup Finals are not famous for quality of play, but the teams of Manchester City and Bolton Wanderers so far overcame the terrors of the big occasion as to give an exhibition of no little skill, and, above all, of brilliant sportsmanship.

The trophy went to Bolton, the heroes of the first Wembley final, but there was so little to choose between the merits of the sides—just the one decisive goal—that the Manchester men retired with little if any less honor than their victors. The Manchester team played with a great load of anxiety, for by one of the ironical freaks of this amazing football season, the club which, by the eliminating test of the knock-out competition, has proved itself the second best between the Channel and the Tweed did not know until the morrow whether a distinguished quest of the cup had not perhaps caused them to suffer the ignominy of expulsion from the first class ranks. But Lancashire is a great football county; with so many warriors in the field occasional casualties are inevitable.

BANDIT KING IS AMBUSHED

Romanetti, the Picturesque Murderer of Corsica, Killed by Gendarmes

PARIS, May 21.—Romanetti, "The King of the Heather," Corsica's most popular bandit and national hero, has just died, riddled with the bullets of French gendarmes. Caught in an ambush, he had his horse shot under him and was picked off by marksmen hidden behind rocks. He died game, firing fowling-pieces until his ammunition was exhausted. He disappears from the scene with the weight of 15 cruel murders at least on his soul, but amid the lamentations and the sincere grief of all true Corsicans.

Took to Hills

Romanetti took to the hills in 1910 after shooting in cold blood a neighbor with whom he was in dispute about a cow. Since then he has maintained an incessant but unequal war with the gendarmerie—unequal, that is, for the gendarmerie—for, as in the Ireland of the Playboy, the whole population in Corsica aids and abets a really romantic criminal. Certainly, Romanetti was romantic—a compound of Rob Roy, Dick Turpin, and no doubt also of Edmond About's Roi des Montagnes. considerable revenue.

A crack revolver shot, Romanetti always, until yesterday, emerged scatheless from the numerous ambushes laid for him and, indeed, usually left a fair number of gendarmes on the ground killed or wounded.

Redresser of Wrongs

In his off moments the bandit king, played the part of Robin Hood, the redresser of grievances. No betrayed maiden but turned to him for redress against her betrayer, and the redress was often accorded in rough fashion. Pride was his fault, and perhaps in the end his undoing. Contemptuous of the gendarmerie, he frequented with splendid audacity the great hotels and dancing halls and night haunts of Ajaccio. Enterprising tourists could always get access to him, and, for a consideration his autographed portrait. On these occasions a dozen friendly volunteers would guard all approaches, and at sound of a warning whistle he could, no matter how drunk (and he was often drunk), pull himself together and glide away.
