BLACKWOOD on Bridge
By EASLEY BLACKWOOD
Mr. Dale Demonstrates Early Finesse for Safety

Mr. Dale is very keen on safety plays. In today's deal he took an early finesse in one suit for the purpose of trying to find out how to play another suit.

Against the six heart contract Mrs. Keen opened the jack of clubs which was taken with the king. With no chance of discarding a heart on anything in dummy, Mr. Dale saw it was going to be necessary to take a finesse against the king of hearts.

Nobody likes to take a finesse at trick two when he is in a slam contract, but Mr. Dale did in this hand and he had a good reason for it. He led a heart and finessed dummy's jack. If this play had lost to the king, it would have meant that he could not have afforded to lose any tricks in the trump suit.

In that case he probably would have led the king of spades and followed with a small one, hoping to guess successfully whether to finesse the jack or not.

But when the heart finesse was successful, it was possible to lose a trick in spades and still bring home 12 tricks. In other words, Mr. Dale could now afford the luxury of a safety play in trumps—a play which would very probably lose one trick but not lose two.

At trick three, then, he let down the ace of spades. He came to his hand with a high diamond and led another spade toward the jack. Mrs. Keen showed out on this trick and the jack was taken by Mr. Abel's queen. However, there was now a proven finesse against Mr. Abel's guarded ten.

If Mrs. Keen had held the four spades to the queen-ten, she defenders still would have got only one trump trick.

As you see, if Mr. Dale had played the king and another spade beginning at trick two, his contract would have been doomed at the start.
