Irish Free State Today Shows Pro-British Tendencies and is Sick of All Extremists

Lack of Policy May Cause Fall of Government But no Group Strong Enough to Put up Determined Fight For Power

The many and various extremist weeklies in the Free State have recently been making their readers' flesh creep by dark hints of conspiracies for bringing the "old ascendancy gang" back into power. This gang is differently described by different weeklies, according to the peculiar shade of the strongly tinted spectacles worn by each. The "Capitalists," the "Freemasons," the "Protestants." the "Planters," the "Ex-Unionists," the "Imperialists," the "Redmonites," the "West British"-all these, and many more, are the titles bestowed upon the enemy, says a writer in the Manchester Guar-

We have only the men of property, the "respectables." These have plenty of goodwill 'and sense, but they are not sure whether they have the confidence of the people, and they, therefore, have not confidence themselves. Under proportionate representation they could form a group which would be influential with any government, ing. and might even be the main support of a government, but they could hardly form a government themselves. The weaker the spirit of extremist Nationalism grows the more complete will be the ascendancy of Catholic Conservatism.

Several Dangers

The break-up of the present government might at any time be brought about either by the illhealth of the president, who holds the cabinet together, or by dissensions within the government party between the realists and the extreme Nationalists.
