Burns Lake Chosen as Site For Major Ski Competition Planned For February

ROSSLAND, B.C. (CP)—Director of the Western Canada Ski Club early in February. Burns Lake, B.C., has been chosen as the site for its two major competitions this winter. The club will host the Alpine events in January while the slalom events are scheduled for February.

Although the annual fall meeting was called to allocate and sanction meets for the ski season, other business under discussion included the establishment of closer relationship with the Dominion Ski Association and the development of skiers in western Canada.

President Dave Spence of Banff was appointed to head the western delegation to the annual meeting of the national association, while Don Turner of Vancouver and Charles Edwards of Rossland will head the junior development committee.

Regional directors appointed include Gerry Blackburn of Calgary; George Garrish of Vancouver, and J. N. Robinson of Rossland. Ada Young of Canmore, Alta., was named publicity director and Les Way assistant publicity director.

Twenty-five delegates attended, including representatives from Edmonton, Calgary, Banff and Blainmore, Alta., as well as the Tye, Seymour and Vancouver clubs.

It shines brightly enough in London's theatreland, where players have been flocking to see Katherine Hepburn in "The Millionaire," one of Shaw's later and, according to critics, least effective plays.

But at Ayot St. Lawrence, tiny picture postcard village 30 miles from London, where Shaw lived, worked and died, the cold hand of public indifference is already felt.

For nearly 40 years Shaw lived in the 14-room Victorian mansion he called "Shaw's Corner."

Six years before he died, he left it to the country, doubtless in the belief he was building a shrine comparable to the Shakespeare shrine at Stratford.

After his death in November, 1950, the National Trust, semi-official organization that looks after Britain's historic buildings, turned Shaw's Corner into a museum.

The National Trust spruced the place up and arranged as many of Shaw's personal belongings and knickknacks as it could in three downstairs rooms. It spent $1,120 on building a car park, engaged an erudite custodian to show visitors around—then sat back and waited for visitors to roll up at 28 cents a head.

For a time the public obligation. But today the stream of cars has dwindled to a trickle. The National Trust reluctantly is coming to the conclusion Shaw's Corner looks like a financial flop.

"Of course, it's too early to say anything definite yet," a Trust official commented. "We will review the situation at the end of the year."

Under the terms of Shaw's bequest, the National Trust would not be able to unload the house on the open market. But it might possibly be let either to a literary person or to an organization.

Carter Regains Lightweight Boxing Crown
CHICAGO—Jimmy Carter, in complete charge throughout with harpooning lefts and crashing rights, regained his lightweight championship last night by scoring a unanimous 15-round decision over game and bloody Lauro Salas of Monterrey, Mexico.

The title changed hands before one of the smallest world championship crowds in modern boxing history—5,283—at Chicago Stadium.

A unanimous decision for the frozen-faced, viciously efficient Negro scrapper reclaimed his title. The 29-year-old Carter had lost to Salas in Los Angeles, May 14.

game I worked this year they called for the ball 50 times by actual count. . . . "Another thing you might not have noticed is that it's become absolutely standard practice for a batter to step out of the box when the count reaches 3 and 2 on him. It's supposed to throw the pitcher off stride, or something. . . .

"The less a pitcher has, the more he hams it up. If I could have had a couple of years of umpiring before I played ball and seen what some of these so-called pitchers get by with, I could have hit 400, easy."

It was suggested that all umpires had been urged to speed up the games, if necessary to crack down hard on the more dilatory managers and pitchers. Were they perhaps partly at fault?

"No," the umpire said. "All of us have really tried to speed them up this season, but we've found we are butting our heads against a brick wall."

TRICKS TO SLOW DOWN
"You can't realize unless you're out there with them every day how many little ornery tricks some managers have of slowing down a game when their pitcher isn't going too good."

"Another way they slow it up is by examining the ball. One
