DOMINION DAY HIS SUBJECT

"Go to Canada and Make a Fortune," Says Lord Beaverbrook

The following speech by Lord Beaverbrook was broadcast in England on Dominion Day and was reported in the Daily Express the next day:

This is Dominion Day, which commemorates the foundation of the Dominion of Canada. The title was chosen from the sentence in the Bible which declares "Thy Dominion shall be from sea to sea"—and Canada looks out eastward to the Atlantic and westward to the Pacific.

I am glad to speak to you tonight because, like all Canadians, I am proud of my own birthright, and I am also loyal to our common Empire.

People over here often get very wrong ideas of Canadian politics and sentiments. That is because they are informed by those who do not understand Canada as the native born alone can. They cannot perceive that an intense local patriotism is perfectly compatible with a strong devotion to the Empire.

Proof

The proof of this loyalty to the Imperial cause can be found in Canada's past—most of all in her very recent past.

The contribution of Canada to the war consisted in the first place of 600,000 men in the field. In money her government advanced 250 millions, and her private banks 60 millions—310 millions in all. In these very concrete forms—men and cash—she proved her devotion to the common cause.

But let us look to the future and deal with the practical. What does Canada offer to Great Britain?

It offers the career to talent—the field of opportunity to the young man of ambition and character in the homeland. It is to the young men here who feel cramped in their opportunities and are capable of daring and endurance that I make a special appeal. They will find that Canada offers to them, but in a higher degree, what it gave their forefathers, who made it.

Great Opportunities

It presents in the swelling hope of its prosperity an immense chance to make money. Let the young man who is not afraid of his destiny go out and make that money. If he likes he can come back and spend it in the Old Country before his hair is noticeably grey.

As this is Dominion Day I speak as a visitor to the capital. The Colonial subjects of the King can look with detachment on the strength and weaknesses of the English character. And it is well that you should absorb in this way the men from the outer marches. And it is well also that these, when they pitch their tents among you, should never forget their provincial standpoint.

You have founded upon native character the greatest Empire since the days of Rome. The veneration for precedent— the attachment to the home farm—the loyalty to a trade union—the love of order even in the middle of internal strife—these are great qualities for a nation to possess. But in themselves they are not enough.

Younger Sons

States before now have perished from too much order, from immobility, from a slavish acceptance of regulation. If it was the elder sons who made Great Britain, it was the younger sons who made the British Empire. They were the men who were prepared to "live dangerously" in the political and economic sense. They put their trust in their own fate and fortune. All of you cannot be elder sons, and it is to the younger sons that I appeal. For they are not bound by regulations and precedents.

If they care to take the bolder course of individualism and adventure, they can appeal to illustrious predecessors. The men who laid the foundations of the Empire were the adventurers Hawkins, Drake, and Raleigh. Officially disowned by their governments, they entered the New World. They thought as little of sacking an enemy town as of singeing a king's beard. Their detractors declared them to be little better than pirates. But Queen Elizabeth was not too proud to receive the wealth they poured into the public fund.

Individual Effort

Who built the British Empire? The young men, the individualists, the adventurers. Who will maintain it? Men of the same type and stock. That is the message of Dominion Day to the youth of Great Britain. Canada is young; its potential wealth is unbounded. For both these reasons it believes in and depends on individual effort and merit and will pay any price to those who can supply the morale and the ability which it needs to develop it.

Canada offers that spirit of individualism its highest chance of realisation. I say to the young men of England, "Go out and take that chance." Turn your face from Europe towards the West. Find your fulfilment in a new world which is yet within the pale of the Empire. That is the message of the Dominion to the Old Country—an inspiration of hope, of promise to untrammelled energy.

And the Old Country answers back: "When you have done your work, here in England you will always find a home."

"WILD JUSTICE" IS EXCITING PICTURE AROUND MURDER

Peter the Great, the new marvel dog of the screen, comes to the Westholme theatre tonight and Tuesday in his latest thrilling starring picture, "Wild Justice."

Filmed in the lovely snow country of the High Sierras, "Wild Justice" presents a rapid succession of exciting events against the majectic background of the snow-clad hills.

The story revolves around a mysterious murder, and presents Peter The Great in an almost-human role. The great dog performs miracles of athletic prowess and demonstrates amazing intelligence.

"Wild Justice" has an unusually well-balanced cast, headed by George Sherwood, Frances Teague and Frank Hagney.

WEBSTER'S NOVEL MAKES GREAT FILM

Lewis Stone, Shirley Mason and Other Favorites in "What Fools Men"

An absorbing pictorial narrative of a dominant personality who could only be affected by opposition from one of his own flesh and blood—that is Joseph Greer as he will be pictured upon the screen at the Westholme Theatre on Wednesday and Thursday by Lewis Stone in "What Fools Men," a cinematic version of the Henry Kitchell Webster novel, "Joseph Greer and His Daughter."

Greer comes from the seclusion of African jungles and steps out of the isolation of a scientist's life to "cut in" on the profits of an invention of his of great commercial value, for which he obtains the backing of a coterie of financiers.

In his vaunted self-belief that he can "buck" the moneyed ilk and hold them to a bargain—Greer has no illusions as to the real motives of these men in backing him—the forceful inventor enthusiastically buys up enough raw material to start the concern functioning on a large scale and therein accepts the bait held out by the schemers, who sell out their stock in the meantime to throw the company into bankruptcy and so gain possession of its assets at their own terms.

Even at that Greer can't just fit himself into the role of a shorn lamb and grimly sets out to take care of his commitments through connections he has made. Then a catastrophe too big for him to weather occurs.

Greer recovers from his staggering blow only by a complete rearrangement of his philosophy and a realization that a will that bends on occasions is the one more conducive toward peace of mind than the iron will, which gives only to break.

Stone, in the interpretation of one of his finest characterizations, has the aid of such notable players as Shirley Mason, Barbara Bedford, Ethel Grey Terry and many others.

"IRON HORSE" VIVID STORY OF PIONEERS

How West Was Joined With East Is Told In Week-End Picture.

How the express business followed the transcontinental railroad, expanding commerce and extending civilization in the West, is recorded with remarkable realism in the picture, "The Iron Horse," which is to be shown at the Westholme Theatre at the end of the week.

It is shown, too, how express was shipped before the railroad crossed the prairie, when Kit Carson rode one horse steadily, day after day, for 4,000 miles. The little animal became so shy of Indians that he would leave the ground at the sight of a feather. But Carson got through with government mail, small express packages and money.

The express commenced transcontinental business with the completion of the railroad in 1869. William F. Harnden had commenced the first express business between Boston and New York on March 4, 1839. In 1840 Alvin Adams established his express service. Wells Fargo first had the pony express with Buffalo Bill Cody as the chief rider.

With the opening of the railroad, the express business became one of the most important and the most picturesque in existence. Express guards worked across the plains with their guns always in reach. Many a good man died defending his little wooden car from attack from Indians and bandits. They asked no quarter and gave none.

"The Iron Horse" reveals the thrilling life of this period of American history with telling effect. George O'Brien, J. Farrell MacDonald and Madge Bellamy have the leading roles.

Ten Years Ago in Prince Rupert

Now with the garbage question settled for a while we can get down to the forthcoming federal election business.

Don't worry—refer the matter to the Provincials.

The Married Man's Lament

The wife and kids have gone away
To seek a slight vacation,
While I roam about the house at night
Filled up with dire vexation.

The dishes pile up on the sink,
The dog has caught the mange;
He thinks I'll go and join them soon,
Or else blow out my brains.

Every day seems just the same,
The restaurant grub's no good;
Can't tell I am eating apple pie,
Or little chunks of wood.

Vacation times are quite O.K.,
If we're away together;
But left to roam the world at large,
Well, I don't think it's clever.

These are the days when Pa is comparing the garden flowers with the specimens in the seed catalogs.

The man who makes money does not always make history.

Which?

We sometimes wonder which fellow passenger is the more irritating, the one that tries to read the back of our paper or the one that won't hold his paper still for us to read.—Punch.
