Crime Of Being Caught Is The Most Heinous.

Laws are numbered by the hundreds and possibly by the thousands and people are constantly breaking them. A few are caught and punished and the others think themselves wonderfully clever and when their less fortunate fellow citizens are caught they are among the first to shout for severe sentences.

Many cases occur where the fathers are notorious law breakers and then because the sons follow in father's footsteps and are caught, the fathers condemn the sons and turn them off.

The chief modern crime seems to be that of being caught. Then an example must be made of the culprit.

Most people break the laws at some time. Let a policeman or police magistrate or Sunday school teacher or parson look back in his life and see if there is not some occasion when he overstepped the bounds and made himself liable to fine or imprisonment. He was not caught and today he is respectable and without stain on his reputation. Others were caught the first time and bear with them the taint of a prison sentence or other evil record.

It is not intended here to suggest that law-breakers should not be punished or even that they be let off with light sentences, all that is suggested is that a more charitable view be taken of failings in our young people often caused by failings in our system which leads some of them to overstep the bounds which the law declares is the one path which they may not go.

Law Breaking Shows Failure Of Society.

When there is law breaking, it indicates that society as organized today has failed. It shows that the leaders of thought and the formulators of customs have failed miserably and the emotion which should pervade us should be one of sorrow at our own failure rather than of anger against those who have been caught breaking the law.

Much Of Savagery Still Remains In Us.

There is much of savagery still in our nature. We have covered ourselves with a veneer of civilization but beneath are all the emotions of our savage ancestors awaiting only the breaking of the veneer to allow them to show themselves in all their old-time ruggedness.

When we read of the excesses of Russia and of the criminal instincts cropping out in other peoples who have had less training than ourselves, we have little to be proud of, for just beneath the surface we have the same only partially curbed vices in embryo. Quickly they develop and often are seen in most unexpected places.

Human Nature Tending Toward Goodness.

There is nothing to worry about in this condition under which we find ourselves. We have not advanced far along the path of evolution but improvement is noted and in the course of a few thousand years we shall probably evolve a man who will be something more than a creature with a painting of civilization on the outside and the savage nature continually cropping out at every crack. We have to accept the human family as we find it and to improve it as much as possible, but we must not think that any one person or agency can upset the laws of nature which are the laws of God and bring about a millennium in an instant. We are struggling feebly to emerge into a better condition and when we see a reversion to type it should be remembered that we all have in us similar impulses and that the faults of youth are often the faults of wrong training or neglect.

ALASKA WILL BE PROSPEROUS

Governor Parks Says Never Has Outlook Been as Bright as Today

KETCHIKAN, April 9.—"Never before in the history of the Territory has the outlook been as bright as it is now. Alaskans have every reason to expect an era of greater prosperity," declared Governor George A. Parks while in Ketchikan.

Governor Parks was here after his annual visit to the national capital. He went east late in December and after a visit in Denver proceeded to Washington where he has been in conference with President Coolidge and the heads of the various departments represented in Alaska.

Decentralization

Efforts are now being made to decentralize the control of Alaskan affairs and to establish as much of the authority within the Territory as possible instead of having the Territory managed by a large number of bureaus in Washington as is now the case, the governor said.

"The co-operation accorded myself, Noel W. Smith, Col. James Steese and others who were in Washington during the past few months in the interest of Territorial matters was extremely gratifying," Governor Parks said. "Each of us found great willingness, for the most part, among congressmen and department heads to be of real assistance to Alaska and I personally feel that some things of benefit to the Territory will be evolved during the coming months." Governor Parks was unable to indicate just what he expects as he says all plans are still in the formative stage.

Three Changes

Three measures presented to congress and which Governor Parks believes will be of great benefit to the Territory are the homestead act, permitting homesteading of ground along irregular lines so as to include the most desirable ground, instead of at right angles as has been the custom heretofore; the fur farm leasing act, permitting the leasing of the public domain to breeders of fur bearing animals; and the townsite act, which will permit the deeding of town lots to natives.

LOCAL MEN NOW BUSY IN SOUTH

Pete Rorvik and George Macdonald Establishing Their Reduction Plant at Toquart

The Victoria Colonist of recent date tells of the operations of the local fishermen who recently went south to establish a reduction plant on the west coast of Vancouver Island. It says:

A firm that is entering the business is that of the Marine Products Ltd., which has for years been operating out of Prince Rupert in different lines of the fishing business. With Capt. P. Rorvik and George Macdonald at the head of the company, this concern is transferring its fleet of seine and other boats to the west coast of Vancouver Island to engage in this business of handling pilchards in the reduction works.

Takes Over Packing Plant

A location has been taken by the Marine Products at Toquart Harbor, where there formerly was located a packing plant operated by S. C. Ruek. This has been overhauled and converted to the use of the reduction purposes. The necessary machinery has been purchased and is in large part in place ready for the opening of the season. Tanks have been bought in Victoria and will be conveyed to the site, and erected to take care of the output.

This company will have a capacity of about 100 tons a day. Dependent upon the results of this season will be the future plans for an increased capacity another year.

Kyuquot Plant

In the whaling station at Kyuquot, which has been acquired by captain J. E. Gilmore, Peter Wallace and others, there will be an effort made this year to utilize the pilchard catch for reduction.

These are only some of the firms that will be in the trade in pilchards this summer. There are a number of others who have made preparation for entering this line of the fishing business as well as the ordinary canning branch, should the run of these fish warrant it.

I coughed night and day, and although I tried several different remedies I could get no relief until a friend advised me to take Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. Co-operative Association to Build on Dock Near Other Houses

W. Nickerson, president of the Co-operative Association, yesterday afternoon. The new plant will be erected on the vacant space of the government wharf between the present fish houses.

ARCHITECTURE A LA RUSKIN

Miss St. James Gives Interesting Address Before Rotary Club on Gothic Forms

An interesting address on Russian and Gothic architecture was delivered yesterday afternoon at the Rotary Club luncheon by Miss St. James of the High School teaching staff. She illustrated her lecture by chalk drawings, showing exactly what she meant.

Taking her hearers back to the Temple of Karma at Thebes, Miss St. James spoke of the Egyptian architecture, which was the oldest known outside of the orient. Then she traced its growth through the Roman, Greek and Norman periods. Gothic architecture originated in France and was featured by its savagery, from which it got its name, its naturalness, grotesqueness, rigidity, redundancy and other features. The main thing about it was the pointed arch, with an apex formed from a triangle which was less than that formed within the semi-circle.

The speaker mentioned many interesting features of this style of dwelling particularly on its truth and falsity, its over-decoration and its general effect.

At the close President McClymont thanked Miss St. James for her address.

The New KLIM
WHOLE MILK
full Cream

It Never Turns Or Sours!

EVERY housewife knows by sad experience what it means to find the milk sour and useless—nearly always, of course, when "the corner" is far away, when someone drops in and an immediate cup of tea is taken for granted, or, in the country, when the next supply of fresh milk can come only with tomorrow's milking.

The New KLIM never sours. It never goes stale. Come heat or cold, long day or short, it never loses the natural sweetness that went with it into the tin. It is always at hand and always the same, lacking only water to turn back again into what it was—whole full-cream milk—rich, appetising, sweet and wholesome.

Neither does The New KLIM freeze. It fears no temperatures. What a relief for the housewife: to have instantly at hand whole full-cream milk that can develop no taint, that cannot turn sour, that cannot freeze—imperishable purity, in the brown-and-yellow tin!
