GOES TO JAIL FOR ASSAULT

Magistrate Says Teachers Must be Protected Especially in Remote Districts

WINNIPEG, Mar. 11.—Stating that female teachers, especially in remoter districts, would have to be protected, and exemplary punishment given woman beaters for whom he expressed a profound contempt, Magistrate Noble in provincial police court passed sentence of two months in jail on Clifford Harrhy, Ashern farmer, convicted of assault on Miss L. M. Testley, teacher of the Barnwald school. On the charge of creating a disturbance in a public school Harrhy was given suspended sentence.

Violent Temper

His worship said a great deal of public interest had been shown in the case, and for this reason the matter could not be dealt with as an ordinary assault. Teachers were public servants, and must be protected. In this case the evidence showed that the complainant had a violent temper, but she was not on trial, and all he could do was to decide whether Harrhy had broken the law. He found that he had. Accused, he said, knew Miss Testley was of an excitable disposition, yet in spite of this fact he had gone to the school looking for trouble. He must understand that teachers are in charge during school hours, and even if classes were sometimes kept going after the usual closing time he had no right to go in the school and take away his children without the teacher's permission.

Sadie Devlin's Evidence

According to evidence given by Sadie Devlin, Winnipeg girl who went to Aashern as "lady's companion" for Miss Testley, Harrhy had come to the school February 1 a few minutes before closing time. He had asked for his children and was told by the teacher school had not yet been dismissed. He told the teacher, she said, that it was long after 4, and he wanted the youngsters. Then the mix-up started.

Miss Testley went out in the lobby and asked Harrhy to go. "You can't have your children. The flag is still flying and school is in session," she said. Harrhy laughed in her face.

"Get out," said the teacher.

"Put me out," challenged Harrhy.

Then came the fight.

Grabbed by Throat

The teacher was grabbed by the throat and struck on the chest. She was pushed on the woodpile, and then for good measure thrown against the walls of the porch. Miss Testley, although a bit winded by the rather rough handling, returned to the fray. While some of her pupils gave Harrhy a poke in the nose, others more playful grabbed the ends of his moustache, and she in her turn gave him a lusty blow on the shoulder with the business end of a broom. His face was scratched till the blood ran down. Someone's nails did deadly work. Witness, however, could not say who did the scratching.

To E. Browne-Wilkinson, defence counsel, witness said she did not get along very well with her companion." She had stayed with her for over six weeks, and during that time there had been a number of squabbles. On two occasions Miss Testley had threatened to knock out witness' brains with a billet of wood. She was greatly relieved, she said, when her mother insisted she came back to Winnipeg.

Harrhy's Evidence

Harrhy, who took the stand in his own defence, said he had gone to the school at 4.20 as shown by his watch. He had set his timepiece by the station clock the previous Saturday. The clock in the school showed 4.02 when he got there. He had knocked at the door and had never gone inside the schoolroom but remained in the lobby. He had asked for his children, who lived three-quarters of a mile from the school, and was going to drive them home as he returned from his trip with a load of straw. The teacher, he said, got very excited. She stamped her feet, clapped her hands and tried to shoo him away. He had only laughed. "Are you going to put me out?" he inquired very mildly. She said that she was.

Scratched His Face

"Then she grabbed me, your worship, and scratched my face. And at the same time she asked her pupils to help her. She put her arm around my neck, while some of the children piled right on top of me. It was then to protect myself that I pushed her away. I didn't touch her at all until she scratched my face," came out in a torrent of words. His worship looked sceptical, but made no remark.

BOUGHT WELL IN EASTERN CENTRES SAYS RUPERT MAN

A. W. Lipsin, of the Acme Importers, returned to the city yesterday after a two month buying trip in the Eastern cities. During his visit east, Mr. Lipsin also visited relatives in Cleveland and Detroit.

Business conditions in Edmonton, Winnipeg, Toronto, and Montreal are rather slow in picking up and Mr. Lipsin found that Vancouver showed greater signs of immediate prosperity.

Resulting from the dullness in the east, Mr. Lipsin was well looked after by the manufacturers there and he was able to do his buying very advantageously.
