DAILY EDITION

Thursday, August 12, 1926.

Boost your town and the town will boost you.
Knock your town and you'll get the knocks back.

Everyone Should Vote at Election.

A great many Prince Rupert people are not on the list of voters. They will not be able to vote unless they take steps at once to see that their names are added to the list. It must be done this week or it cannot be done at all.

The person who cannot vote is not a full-fledged citizen of the country in which he resides. He is not one of the sovereign people, the ones who rule the destinies of the nation. The one vote may make all the difference between right and wrong, between progress and retroaction, between advancing to a new civilization and reversion to barbarism. Because of the importance of the vote, we suggest that every man or woman entitled to the privilege should see that the name is properly registered.

The political committees are doing their best to get people registered, but it is for the people themselves to make sure that the work has been done.

Up Goes the Duty Tax High as Hayman's Gallows.

The largest tax imposed in the Dominion of Canada is the customs duty. It is imposed on the people who consume the goods produced in the country. The working man pays most of this tax because a working man eats just as much as a rich man and he is likely to have a larger family.

The poor man who votes for high customs duties is building a gallows with which to hang himself, just as did Hayman of old. It is an imposition on the poor by the rich for the purpose of increasing their riches. Beware of the man or party who talks of raising the tariff tax on the goods we eat or wear or otherwise use in our daily life. He is not a friend of the people.

Meighen Position on Railway Rates.

Premier Meighen is against Parliamentary interference with railway rates. His close associate, Sir Henry Drayton, in the House attacked the Prince Rupert elevator again and again. Louis Patenaude, minister of justice in the Meighen cabinet, is openly hostile to the western grain route and in league with the interests operating in the East. Bury, of Edmonton, still continues to attack Prince Rupert and belittle our efforts to secure a place in the sun. What chance is there for Prince Rupert to succeed if the Meighen Government should be returned?

Drayton is hostile to Prince Rupert, Patenaude is hostile to the west, Bury is viciously against us. Then in spite of this they come and ask us to support a man who, if he had the chance, would go east and ally himself with this group of enemies.

Conservatives Are Always Looking Back.

Conservatives are always looking back. The writer of a short note published in yesterday's paper refers to the building of the C.P.R. by the Conservatives as an evidence that the Conservatives do not always look eastward. That is rather far back to look. What the writer of that letter cannot deny is that Sir Henry Drayton and a number of other Conservative leaders are openly hostile to Prince Rupert. Patenaude sees nothing but Montreal and Bury sees nothing but Vancouver. They are all against the opening up of a second port on the Pacific.

As we see it, anyone who wishes to forward the interests of the East and to give an opportunity to the enemies of Prince Rupert will vote for the Conservative candidate at this election. Anyone wishing to place Prince Rupert on the map and keep her there will vote for the man who got us the elevator, who arranged for its lease to the wheat pool and who has consistently supported the policy of working for Prince Rupert and the district of which this port is the centre.

PRIZE FIGHTER TAKES PART IN MOVIE AND USES HIS STRONG ARM

Story of Play to be Shown Here Tomorrow and Saturday at Theatre.

"His Own People," the play to be shown at the Westholme Theatre tomorrow and Saturday has to do with the strong-arm tactics of a prize fighter. Rabbi Cominsky is the father of two sons, Morris and Sammy. His paternal affection turns to Morris because the boy is ambitious and studious and studies to become a lawyer. He dislikes Sammy on account of the lad's disinclination for study. The father learns that Sammy has become a prize fighter under a different name, and he disowns the son and denies him the house. In reality the boy turned to pugilism as a means of helping his parents, and despite his disinclination, he still loves them. Morris, on the other hand, is ashamed of his parents and when he succeeds in the law, he proposes marriage to his employer's daughter and claims that he is an orphan. However, he still makes demands for money upon his unsuspecting father and the old man, during one of his attempts to get money for Morris, succumbs to exposure in a blinding snowstorm. He feels that he is dying and calls for his Morris to give him his dying blessing.

Learns of Illness

Morris does not heed his father's call but Sammy, the prize fighter, happens to visit his little next door sweetheart, Mamie, and learns of his father's serious illness. In order to quiet the aged rabbi, Sammy poses as his brother for the benediction, taking advantage of his father's eyesight being dimmed by illness. He accepts the blessing, although his heart is breaking and the happiness experienced by the apparent visit of Morris helps the father to recover. As he sits, happily convalescing, he learns of Morris' claim that he is an orphan. Not believing the report, he decides to find out for himself, accordingly, he sets forth for the home of Morris' bride-to-be and at the engagement dinner, Morris publicly denies his father.

Old Man Broken

Broken, the old man leaves for his home. In the subway station he runs into his wife and Mamie, who had just returned from a prize fight in which Sammy had been the winner over the champion. Mamie learns of Morris' actions and tells Sammy, who had hidden behind a pillar at the approach of his father. Burning with indignation, Sammy dashes uptown to the home of Morris' fiancée. He enters the dining room and before the startled guests he denounces his perfidious brother, drags him away from the table and out into the street, where he pushes him into a taxicab, directing the driver to head for the old home. Arriving at his father's house, he leads his brother into the room where the rabbi sits grieving. Realization of what he had done comes to Morris and he begs his father's forgiveness. A soul-stirring ending that replaces a tear with hearty laughter sends the audience home from one of the greatest character studies ever seen on the screen.

THE MAN IN THE MOON

says:

A man has to dig these days to get to the real cheeks or lips of some flappers.

A New York woman was recently arrested in the States for rolling her stockings on the street. Tough luck.

If all the locals interested in politics these days were stood back to back they'd still discuss the political situation.

If you can't think of a rhyme in the political limerick competition, whistle one.

The flies seem to get the most kick out of the camp in the evening.

Why not stage a political debate during the visit of Premier Meighen between Harvey Fraser and Dave Stuart. The Premier might learn a few political pointers.

Ours is a funny house—either the youngster is in mischief, the old man is in debt, the cat is in the tarvia, sister is in the movies, or mother is in the throes of preparing the next meal.

It isn't always a boat that runs on the rocks, I am continually running on the financial rocks.

These are the days when the boy is trying to make a Robinson Crusoe coat out of mother's last year fur stole.

The man who is dying on his feet is riding for a fall.

A cat recently got caught in the fan of a motor car. In other words it was a "categorical" mix-up.

It is said that some women can even take a joke to the altar.

This is the amateur fishing season when the fishermen catch more flies than fish.

DOLLAR A LINE FOR LIMERICK IS PRIZE

Political Rhymes Invited Having To Do With Present Election Campaign.

There have been several poets try their hand at the limerick competition for which prizes of five dollars for first prize and three dollars for second is offered. The following are a few examples of those coming in:

There was a voter named Beralo, Who had swallowed the Liberal lingo.

But then he got sore And to himself swore, "I'll vote for Jim Brady, by Jingo."

Fred Stork is the man I'll support Through good and evil report. We can see what he's done So whoever may run, It's Fred who still holds the fort.

To Brady we're looking for help, Can't help it if Liberals do yelp. To get in means hard work, Which we know he'll not shirk, So put in your vote soon to help.

There is a politician from Teek Who'll be smothered in votes to his neck. For the Grits have been shady And we'll all vote for Brady And get clean government, by heck.

The Liberals have chosen Fred Stork, They know he can do more than talk. While on his campaign He can't hurry the train, He would far rather travel than walk.

Rules of Contest The rules of the contest follow:

Each verse should be written on a separate piece of paper and signed by the author, not for publication but as a guarantee of good faith. Only the names of the winners will be published.

The verses must, as far as possible, be perfect limericks. No other class of verse is admitted.

Many of the verses will be published but not necessarily all.

Verses should be mailed to "Contest Editor," Daily News or to be left at the office.
