Local Drama Has Very Wide Appeal.

The dramatic works of William Shakespeare have a very strong appeal to many in this country, but they have nothing like the appeal that there is in a local drama. When two hijackers in the dead of night seized a rum running schooner, cruelly butchered the owner and his son and escaped to the United States, it aroused a feeling of resentment. When they were cleverly captured by the police and brought back to Canada, tried and convicted, it caused a feeling of satisfaction that crime was being properly rewarded. When the men appealed to higher courts to delay the time of execution and possibly to escape from the toils and get free, an emotion of fear was registered throughout the country—fear that they might by some subterfuge, through the manipulation of some clever lawyer make a getaway. Again there was satisfaction that they were to be rewarded according to their desserts and when the climax approached the mind of the populace was ready to receive a strong impression. Most dramatically it was given when Sowash, who was once a better man, warned people that the methods now employed were not producing proper results and could not produce them. It was no new message but the mind of the people was just ready to receive it.

Victoria Eager To Get The Message.

A day or two before the execution Dr. Clem Davies of the Victoria City Temple went to Vancouver and got the message from the man who knew he was about to die. We in our snug complacency do not know anything about what it means to be a criminal and neither do we realize how near many of the most respectable citizens have come to being criminals. We do not realize how many of them ought to be classed as criminals, if all the truth were known. Dr. Davies is a young man of rare insight, and he knew. After the execution he told the story to his congregation in the Royal Victoria Theatre and he spoke to close on four thousand people that evening, one group at 7.30 and the other at 9. On two consecutive evenings during the following week he preached again to record congregations in another hall and told the same story. He warned them against the pitfalls of crime and used the dramatic story of Sowash to bring it before them with sufficient force to leave a lasting impression.

Another Drama Two Thousand Years Ago.

The drama was used for a somewhat similar purpose two thousand years ago, when the greatest of men was crucified between two thieves. The execution, horrible as it was, is remembered to this day and told about in every pulpit in the country. True it was not the execution of a criminal but the tragedy was there and was used to impress the human mind.

Why Not Use Human Drama For Teaching?

Why not use the human drama for bringing home lessons and impressing them. Principal Brady, in a letter published yesterday, objects to this, yet he is an exponent of the dramatic art, as set forth by Shakespeare. The drama of life around us, we think, is just as impressive as Hamlet or Macbeth. Mr. Brady writes a good letter, but we think he has missed the point. Life as it is lived today is the life we have to meet, the bad influences of today are the ones we have to counteract. We have all been puzzled in regard to the prevalence of crime and the failure to reform the criminal. The old methods have proved abortive. Here is a man who is criminal and who knows from bitter experience whereof he speaks. Why not hear him? Some newspapers refused to pass on the message. We think they were wrong. We are glad that a small portion of it was telegraphed to this paper and given out here.

Proposal to Appoint New Official in Addition to Engineer is Not Favored

MAYOR RESERVES DECISION

Charge Made That in Past Cost Sheets had Been Faked by City Engineer

The proposal was made last night at the city council meeting that a time keeper who understood cost accounting should be employed who should report direct to the finance committee and the city treasurer and not to the engineer for the purpose of keeping track of the city work and checking up on the apportioning of the costs of the various jobs in the city.

In urging the employment of such a person Alderman Casey made the charge that there was some five thousand dollars of city money unaccounted for during the regime of a former engineer and he was not satisfied with the way city tenders were made when bidding against private contractors. When there was the whole city to draw from he did not see how any contractor could hope to compete.

Enough Official

Alderman Stephens thought there were enough officials in the city. They were appointing an engineer and if the aldermen would quit interfering with the engineer in the discharge of his duties they would not need anybody. If he could not keep the time they had better let him go. He was opposed to confidential men and preferred to do the city business in the open.

Mayor Newton also opposed the appointment. If there had been defects under former engineers, let them wait and see what the next man measures up to before taking such action.

Alderman Casey with some heat said the cost sheets had been faked in the past and in future there would be the same latitude. What he wanted to do was to safeguard the public.

Alderman Perry expressed the opinion that in the past everything had been done honestly and he favored trying the new engineer before making such an appointment.

Cost of Rock Work

Alderman McKechnie said it was an easy matter to make estimates come out right. A time keeper would check up on the work. He criticized the cost of putting the rock on the streets today and advised that such an official as proposed should be employed.

Alderman Joe Greer did not see how a man who was time keeper and cost accountant for the whole city could be on the job all the time. He would have to get his information from the other officials.

On a vote being taken four aldermen voted for and four against and the mayor reserved his decision for a week. Those voting for the appointment were Aldermen Casey, Brown, McKechnie and Larson and against were Aldermen Stephens, Joe Greer, J. W. Greer and Perry.

NEW CZECH PARLIAMENT 12 WOMEN MEMBERS

PRAGUE, Jan. 26.—Czechoslovakia's new parliament has twelve women member—eight in the House of Deputies, and four in the Senate—out of a total membership of 450 in the two houses.

The comparatively small proportion of women was rather a surprise in view of the fact that well over half the 7,000,000 voters are women, and that much encouragement is given women to participate in public affairs.

The office of President of the Republic may even be held by a woman.
