Curious Ideas Of Enjoyment.

On a steamer coming north this week was a man who was sobering up after a month's holiday in the south. He said that he had gone south with a thousand dollars in his pocket and had never left the hotel to which he went on arrival. During that time he had not been without a bottle and on leaving they gave him three more bottles to "sober up."

The man inquestion said he had had a good time and did not regret it. He never kicked, once his money was gone but just got busy and earned some more.

What seemed so odd was that the man should consider he was having a good time when he was drunk for a month. He had seen nothing and met no one except such friends as might come to the hotel to share his libations. Apparently his one aim in life was to be drunk and forget that he was a man.

Alberta At Last Seeing The Light.

Alberta is beginning to see the light. One of the Edmonton newspapers of recent date had an editorial article on the front page showing how the Alberta farmers have lost money through refusing to ship grain to the Pacific instead of to the Atlantic. The article stated that Alberta shippers saved from 1¼ to 3 bushels more by shipping west and that the cash prices paid at the Vancouver Grain Exchange were higher than those paid at Winnipeg. It added:

"Very few farmers who ship their own wheat have taken advantage of the handsome premiums obtainable on the Vancouver market, but have been deceived by insidious eastern propaganda into shipping the long, expensive way, eastwards.

"The cost of shipping a bushel of wheat from Fort William, via Montreal, to Liverpool in the summertime is 23 cents a bushel, and in winter, 33 cents. The average all year around rate from Vancouver to Liverpool is 22 cents. The cost of shipping from Alberta to Vancouver instead of Fort William is also less.

"Millions of dollars have been lost to Alberta farmers this year and millions of dollars have been pocketed by the middlemen."

Ottawa Formalities Much As Usual.

Apparently the Ottawa government is not expecting to be defeated. It is carrying on as usual. As in former years on the assembling of a new parliament, all that is done the first day is to elect a speaker. The second day is the big social event and it is the following week before any business is done. Then the debate on the address in reply to the speech from the throne is opened, usually by two of the younger or newer members of parliament, and the fun begins.

Just how soon a division will be forced does not seem clear. It would be desirable to have it at as early a date as possible but much lies with the opposition. It is an easy matter for them to force a vote and they may do so at any time, possibly by a direct resolution expressing want of confidence in the government or by an amendment to the address.

The people of Canada would like to have the matter settled at as early a date as possible so that the business of the country may be stabilized.

Progressive Legislation Seems To Be Expected.

It seems likely that progressive legislation will be passed at the present session of parliament. At any rate an intimation will be given as to legislation that is likely to come before the legislative bodies within the next year or two. The speech today, which may possibly be summarized in this issue, should give some inkling of what is to happen.

It is possible that the government may introduce a program of legislation and then if the members vote against it make an appeal to the people through another election for support. This could hardly be done at the present session but it might well be done at any future session.

If you ask for Bovril-get Bovril

Bovril is not merely a "Beef extract." It is the strength and substance of beef, nourishing, invigorating, energizing, with world-wide reputation for unvarying quality. Drink Bovril for lunch—or whenever you feel tired and "let down." But when you ask for Bovril at fountains—hotels—restaurants—see that you get Bovril—and not a substitute that lacks the essential vital elements that distinguish Bovril.

Useless to Try to Limit the Engines of War Once Conflict Commences Declares Journalist

Famous English Writer Says Battleships Will be Useless and and Civil Life More Dangerous Than Military

(By J. L. Garvin)

"War is hell; let's make it so" was the famous dictum of a soldier personally humane; and he was as good as his word. "Leave them nothing but their eyes to weep with. Fortunate or luckless, according as you read it, are those whose eyes under modern conditions are not amongst the first sense to go. Air warfare and the new poison gases do not begin with a desire to spare them; nor are they required for weeping. The cruelty of modern conflict means a fate past tears and instils an unnatural stoicism. Long after, and unawares, come the tears, if they come at all, with that "memory of what has been and nevermore may be," which has been known to bring grieving to the hardest of hearts.

No Limited Warfare

If you want to abolish the submarine you must abolish the war altogether. The greater includes the less. The idea of war on limited liability is the most pathetic of human delusions. If you are to have it at all you must have it at its worst, and cannot have it otherwise. The submarine, though it happens to be particularly inconvenient to ourselves, is only one symptom of the evil nature of the thing and far from being the most virulent. As the machines, the forces, the agents, the brains of the scientific age become more terrible in perversion, what we call armed conflict, if resumed by an illfated world, must become more relentless, unsparing, until civilization perishes from misuse of the powers that might have raised modern life to a new grandeur and happiness and beauty.

When war breaks out you cannot limit its instruments nor mitigate it in any respect by land or sea or air. You might as well ask the conflagration to be mild or the hurricane to be gentle; or the colliery explosion not to stifle, burn, and entomb alive; or the blind waters of the broken dam not to tear habitations from its path and engulf the dwellers.

Disarmament All Round

Disarmament means henceforth a sterner demand upon nations than any of them has yet frankly faced. Piecemeal disarmament, applying to particular elements and weapons in a manner more to the advantage of some nations than of others, is henceforth impracticable. The next step must be a measure of disarmament all round; and in that process each people must give up something it especially values to compensate other peoples for the sacrifices they are asked to make.

There is another point. The submarine is no longer the most terrible of fighting instruments. Far from that. It is feeble, uncertain, almost humane by comparison with other devices. Let us shake ourselves out of a dream and try to visualize the real character of the next war. The eternal fallacy of military annals is the idea that the next war will be like the one before. Now, in all probability, a future struggle would be nothing like the last. Air-power has revolutionized everything. Who would be so mad as to make war long if they could make it short? The speed and efficiency of air squadrons is continually increasing. They will strike at the heart. Their bombs will crash continually on the dense cities without respect to age or sex. Poison fumes will choke and kill. Fire will ravage. The shattering, the stifling, the conflagrations will go on together. The civilian population will have the weight of casualties, not the armies and navies. Over the heads of the armies and navies invasion will occur in its most intense and devastating form.

Battleships Helpless

What is the use of sailors of the obsolete school saying that the fleet would still maintain our supplies when it could not save those that consume them, even if—which is doubtful — it could protect the harbors, docks, depots, or railway terminals? The battleships would be as helpless as medieval castles in face of these things. Our army, having to move by sea-transport, would probably never see the face of an enemy.

By the last paradox of modern war, it would be safer to be a soldier or sailor than a civilian in a large town. By comparison with the new circumstances the submarine will not be a decisive instrument. There will be quicker and more frightful work than it is capable of accomplishing. While our air-inferiority remains what it is, we might as well throw into the Atlantic the larger part of the huge total of £120,000,000 annually that we still spend on what we solemnly call defence.

Shadow Grim Thing

The men of M1 lie dead together in their steel sarcophagus at the bottom of the sea. They were mostly young. They perished because of the shadow of war which the existence of armaments recognizes. If this shadow of war is a grim thing, what of the substance if it materializes again? The submarine would be relatively helpless if the war were short; its revival inevitable if the war were long, even if paper compacts against it were possible, which they are not. Unless we abolish war itself, by no means on earth can we lessen its instruments or mitigate its horrors. Often a dreadful necessity in the absence of a system of international justice, its object was always large murder, and is now the murder of civilians in the mass, men, women, and children together. Its means necessarily include every device which can inflict slaughter, mutilation, torture, and destruction. More than ever is it devilish by nature, and none of its weapons is more devilish than another. Heavy artillery and machine guns are really not merciful. To lie on the ground with your limbs shattered, or drilled through your vitals with machine gun bullets, may be a little worse than being sunk in a hurry at sea. War is as bad now as once when cannibalism was the end of it, or when hands and feet were cut off and eyes put out and babies spitted. We can do no more good by trying to lop the branches. We must bend our minds and souls without deviation to hew it down by the root and extirpate the last fibre that feeds it from the darkness below.

THE MAN IN THE MOON says:

THE only way to find out exactly what other people think of you is to get married.

THE increasing importance of Sunday is seen in the increasing number of days it takes to rest up after the exertions of the seventh day.

THE town that tolerates a knocker, deserves to be knocked.

WOMEN ought to have clear minds. They change them so often.

THE girls say it's easy enough to find a desirable husband. The difficulty is to find a desirable single man.

SOME people make asses of themselves and then grumble all day because someone takes a ride.

NOBODY likes to get a moustache cup for a Christmas present and much less a young man whose only offense is that he sometimes forgets to shave.

SOME men are so shy they have to go to the movies in order to wink at a girl.

IN some circles drinking has become such a popular pastime that young men eat cloves to make their friends believe they have been dissipating.

THERE'S a man in town who is always talking about himself. You all know him. He did wonderful things when he was young. When only three years old he was so musical he played on the linoleum.

THE new way of keeping your shirts clean is to send them to the laundry regularly.

PITY the man who marries a good cook. He soon suffers from indigestion and ends up with inflammation of the dieteties.

THE road to success is paved with advertising and decorated with well chosen publicity.

Her Liver Was Bad And She Felt Tired and Depressed

Mrs. M. Siefert, Grosswerder, Sask., writes:—"I was greatly disturbed with pains in my liver, and felt tired and depressed most of the time.

One day I read about

Milburn's

LAXA-LIVER PILLS

and the next time I went to town I bought four vials of them.

I have used them regularly, and after two months' use I feel like an entirely different woman.

Now, I always recommend them to any of my friends who are troubled as I was."

There's only one "Laxa-Liver Pill", and that's the one put up for the past 32 years, by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.
