Prince Rupert and Vancouver

In Prince Rupert at the present time the necessity is apparent of establishing a future progressiveness so that the city may be developed along the lines promulgated in the vision of its founders. Vancouver, before the war, was little more than a C. P. R. town. Most of the shipping through the port was the C. P. R.'s, but, in competition with the wide awake neighbors to the south, there were those who had a vision of what Vancouver could attain in the way of commercial development. This vision has become justified and, year by year, the port has expanded, making the city what it is today—a great distributing and industrial centre.

A city does not develop a port, but the port develops the city. If a port is to be established as a shipping centre, it is necessary that it be so located as to have an inward and outward movement of produce, raw materials, and manufactured goods, either foreign or local. A port, to be such in the proper sense of the word, must be an outlet for a country developed in the matter of production or manufactures and an inlet for those commodities not manufactured or produced locally.

Prince Rupert is Justified as Port

The port of Prince Rupert is a national outlet and has a just claim to its share of the movement of exports and imports of the country. It cannot be believed that those who, with vision and ambition, established the port were mistaken in their mature judgment in locating it. Instead, easily accessible, with a harbor second to none and 500 miles nearer than any other Pacific Coast port, it is justified as a main artery to the Orient at least.

Advisedly, conditions now exist here that may be traced to the competition of the two main railroads running into Vancouver. Prince Rupert has been sacrificed to the welfare and development of the southern port. This, however, cannot justify the cessation of the transportation through this port. The capital already invested here, through the building of the railway and the provision of facilities, must be protected through a policy of port development obtained by the shipping of cargoes to and from the Orient and elsewhere.

Action is Necessary

The suggestion is made that a harbor commission, consisting of men of sound business experience and local interests, might be appointed by the government, or elected. Such a board, like that in Vancouver and other ports of importance, would be in to create an agency or representation in the Orient to arrange a position to borrow money or have a subsidy granted in order for the passage of cargoes through this port and charter the vessels to carry such cargoes—bringing silk or other Oriental commodities here and returning with grain, lumber, etc.

The policy of wait and see will not get Prince Rupert very far. Action seems necessary and the matter rests with those who have faith in the possibilities of the port and who have interests centred here and dependent on local development. There should be a campaign not only to advertise the port in the Orient and elsewhere, but to actually secure business for it.

When Prince Rupert actually becomes a competitive shipping port, and not until then, will it become a progressive centre.

TOPLEY STRIKE
LOOKING GOOD

Frank Taylor Already Preparing To Ship Ore From Mine He Recently Discovered.

BIG SHOWING

SMITHERS, June 26.—Glowing reports are continuing to be received in connection with the new strike of gold-silver ore made by Frank Taylor near Topley a few weeks ago. Old prospectors and mining men in general who have looked over the property all seem to be agreed that the showing promises to be one of the greatest finds made in a long time.

Mr. Taylor came down to Smithers from his claims on Wednesday to make arrangements for the immediate shipping of ore. Although it is only a little over a week since he was here before to record the claims, he has now over six tons of ore piled up ready to be hauled out and a wagon road has been opened up right to the property. Hauling out the ore will be a simple matter as the ore body has been found in a flat country.

The ore for shipping has been taken from an open cut about thirty feet long, and samples have run as high as $101 per ton. The gold values in five samples assayed at an average of $12.50 per ton, the lowest being just over $9 and the highest $16.50. The other values are principally silver.

The dyke on which the lead has been found apparently extends across country for many miles, in fact, right to the Babine Lake, and although numerous assays have been made from the various outcroppings, this new find appears to be the richest.

Taylor believes that he has now found the foot wall and has traced the ore body for a distance of 297 feet in width. In length it has been exposed by nature for 300 feet and traced another 200, but it then becomes buried under glacial wash.

There is considerable excitement in the district and other reports are anxiously awaited.

and am just twice the girl I was, and can enjoy everything in general life so much more. I am very grateful for what your Pills have done for me."

September 1. This season he will try out the Stuart and Tacla lakes section.

E. A. Lewis and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Alteman are on their way to this district from Rogers, Idaho, in search of a suitable site for a fur farm. They are travelling on a Chevrolet truck, which has been specially fitted out for the excursion. That fur farming in Cariboo is attracting attention as far afield as Idaho gives an insight into the possibilities of this form of farming.
