Wheat Situation is Interesting.

The protein content of Canadian wheat averages so much above that of wheat from other countries that there should be even more price preference for the Canadian farmer than is now obtained, but it is doubtful whether such recognition will come so long as chemical analysis is not gven definite weight in the established standards for wheat grading, says the Royal Bank report. Neither United States nor Canadian standards give a recognition to this factor, that results in increased return to the farmer producing extra fine wheat.

Protein content of the wheat constitutes an index of the gluten content in the flour. Flour with high gluten content is more nutritious, absorbs more water, and will make more loaves of bread per barrel. Standards of bread making in the United States and Canada have reached a point where bakers pay close attention to the chemical content of their materials with the result that they are willing to pay premiums for better flours. When this was first realized, millers were able to pick up odd lots of good quality wheat in a particular grade without paying more than the average price for the particular grade. Now, however, the situation has changed. A recent statement in "Wheat Studies" is to the effect that: "There are great variations in the protein content of wheats of a given grade. Consequently, because of the importance of this factor in the millers' requirements, there is commonly a far greater range of prices for wheats of the same grade but of different protein content, than between average prices for adjacent grades."

Farmer Fails to Profit by Quality.

To a great extent the farmer has failed to profit by this new criterion of wheat values because his wheat is sold almost entirely by standard grades. The dry land farmer who produces under conditions of high cost both because of summer fallowing and frequent loss of crops is the farmer whose wheat would receive most recognition under this new standard. Recognition of protein content as a factor in grading wheat will do much to aid any of the farmers who are now marginal producers and will also raise the general level of the quality of the wheat produced. In the long run, standardization of a type which gives full credit for quality benefits both the producer and consumer.

In line with the idea concerning the importance of emphasizing protein content is another suggestion pointing out the advantages of a policy of keeping low grades off the market and using these grades for feed purposes. Not only do low grades have a disproportionately bearish effect upon the market but they also tend to injure the reputation of the region from which they are derived. Strict maintenance of present standards has gone far to reward quality production but because of the high quality of our wheat further refinement of standards in terms of protein content will be particularly advantageous to Canada.

Demand in Orient Has Increased.

Last year we called attention to the probability of increasing wheat consumption in the far east as a result of the higher standards of living under the new industrial regime. Figures that have since become available show decreasing rice consumption accompanied by increasing demand for wheat. Oriental trade with Canada is increasing at a surprising rate. In the year ending April, 1926, Canadian exports to China had a value of $25,717,000 compared with $6,357,000 in the previous year and exports to Japan had a value of $36,824,000, as compared with $21,748,000 for 1925. Nearly half of the value of these exports was wheat and this would seem to indicate a buying power which will, in those countries, enable them to purchase wheat even at the prices prevailing during the past year. It is hard to estimate the possible demand from this quarter in case there were a world surplus with corresponding price reductions. Recently Japan has placed a high tariff on wheat that may tend to cut down these imports, but a large proportion of the wheat imported by Japan is ground and exported to the Asiatic market so that no substantial decrease in demand from this quarter is to be anticipated.

AN APPEAL TO EXCURSIONISTS

Those Who Go to Terrace and Other Interior Points Asked to be Careful

The Forest Branch wishes to make a special appeal to citizens going on excursions, fishing parties and engaging in other outdoor recreations over the present week end. The present protracted spell of unusually dry weather with accompanying low humidity conditions, has presented a serious forest fire hazard and it is known from newspaper reports which are not in the least exaggerated, the appalling damage to timber and property, and loss of human life which is now taking place in the southern part of the province.

So far this summer the northern coast and Interior have been singularly free from destructive fires, but summer is now approaching its peak with the hazard increasing. An excursion of many local citizens is taking place to Terrace and vicinity this week end. It is surely not too much to ask them to remember the recent tragedy of the Banff-Windermere road and the conflagrations in Kootenay Park and on Vancouver Island. Repetition of these calamities is not wanted in Northern B.C. There is therefore only one obvious appeal to be made—Take no chances with matches, cigarettes, camp or picnic fires in or near forested lands. Don't throw lighted cigarettes out of automobiles or train windows.

When visiting interior points remember that it is largely through the utmost care and intelligent use of fire on the part of the citizens in the northern interior communities, that 1926 has been practically so far a smokeless summer. Don't spoil their pride in this achievement.

RAISING FUNDS SUMMER CAMP

Sale at Salvation Army Headquarters is Going On Today.

The girl guards and boy scouts of the Salvation Army are leaving Monday for their camp at Cedarvale and will remain there two weeks. In order to pay the expenses of the camp a sale of work is being held this afternoon at the Salvation Army barracks in charge of Mrs. Whatman. Those in charge are:

Refreshments: Miss M. Almon and Miss E. McOuatt, assisted by the girl guards.

Plain sewing: Mrs. H. Smith, Mrs. Cook and Mrs. Rae.

Fancy work: Miss E. Griffiths and Mrs. Carlyle.

Home cooking: Miss E. Leek.

RURAL DEAN MARSH RESIGNS PASTORATE

Ill Health Compels Widely Known District Clergyman to Relinquish His Duties.

After having spent many years at Terrace in charge of the Anglican congregation there, Rural Dean T. J. Marsh, widely known throughout the north, has been compelled to resign from the active ministry owing to ill health. Mr. Marsh will remain in Terrace for the time being at least. His resignation is a matter of regret to his parishoners who will wish him a speedy recovery from his illness.

DESERT AIR LINE

JERUSALEM July 15.— The Cairo-Karachi air-bus service will soon be an accomplished fact, work having already been commenced on hangar construction at the terminus.

It is expected that the new aerial transport system will reduce the present trans-desert traffic and soon, it may be expected, a trip from Egypt or Palestine to India and back will be no more than a week-end jaunt.
