GYROS WINNERS IN BALL GAME

Seventh Inning Rally Gave Service Club Victory Over Native Sons Last Night

On the short end of a 2 to 0 score at the end of the sixth inning, the Gyro Club indulged in an orgy of hitting in the final frame of last night's Senior League baseball game and emerged winners over the Native Sons of Canada by 8 to 2 thus dropping the losing streak of the past several weeks in the running for the season's honors.

Except for a few errors, it was a good match and was followed with interest by a good crowd of fans including practically the entire membership of the Gyro Club which was out to give its team its vocal and moral support. Scattered hits gave the Native Sons their two runs in the early innings and the Gyros who, up to that time, had been unable to score, got two walks off Lambie, the Sons' hurler, in the seventh inning and followed this up with a bombardment of the rock pile which, by the time the smoke of battle had cleared, had netted them eight runs and cinched the game.

Lambie and Balfour comprised the Sons' battery with Schenkler and McKeown for the Gyros. Gordon and Ralph Smith were the umpires.

The next game will be on Monday between the Gyro Club and the Grand Terminals.

The league standing to date is as follows:

	W.	L.	Pct.
Native Sons	6	3	667
Terminals	3	4	429
Gyro Club	3	5	375

FOOTBALL LEAGUE MEMBERS AT DANCE

Enjoyable Time Last Night at I.O.D.E. Hall for Young Folks

Members of the Intermediate Football League deserted their pig-skin punting activities last night to disport themselves in the terpsichorean art. With a number of friends they gathered in the I.O.D.E. Hall for an informal but very delightful dance.

To the tune of Currie's orchestra, composed of Miss Jean Currie and Messrs. Jim Currie and Bill Murray, some mean Charleston steps were demonstrated. The refreshments served by Mrs. Currie were par excellence and all enjoyed themselves so thoroughly they went home early—in the morning.

Tag and social dances kept the crowd on the go all the time. Among those noticed tripping the light fantastic were: Mrs. Davis, Misses Gawthorn, M. Thompson, F. Thompson, Bond, Wilson, Symington, Zarelli, Brochand, Alliston and Messrs. H. Gawthorn, A. Sharp, T. Peacock, R Peacock, C. Clapp, D. Gurvich, H. McDonald, F. Glass, L. Bond, G. Currie, C. Cameron, W. Chater, M. Stevens, A. Coombs, N. Byrne, M. Bussinich, R. Reid.

MEN GO TO SEE WOMEN PLAYING

Tennis Shows off Figure to Advantage Says Article in English Journal

MEN ARE NEGLECTED.

Only Sport in Which Woman Practically Holds Her Own With Members of Other Sex

(Country Life.—London, Eng.)

A few days ago one of those gifted journalists who can write a disjointed column about nothing in particular every morning and compel you to read it when you yourself ought to be doing something more urgent, reported with glee what his curious eve had hit on in a French paper. The girls of France had been required in an examination to state in what period they would have preferred to live; one, it is true, was for the Middle Ages (because husbands were away after Saracens), but the majority were for their own time. They gave their reasons, and among them were the clothes of the day and the liberty to take up sports. One might guess from Wimbledon that the girls of England, of all ages, would express the same preference, and for the same reasons. Wimbledon represents the triumph of women. Gallantry suggests that it may be quality and not quantity, but the women appear to outnumber the men in the stands and on the lawns by four to one. And not only that—they are greater "draws" when playing. It had to be stated once during the Wimbledon fortnight, and may as well be stated here, that "Mlle. Lenglen not only fills the galleries of the Centre Court, she can empty them by playing somewhere outside." Yet more—when this and that happens, and it is put about that they are not going to play, they get columns and columns in the papers when the man of corresponding eminence gets a paragraph. The rib of M. Borotra's—is it a rib?

Attraction of Tennis

There is a lady in the poetry books whose clothes "more expressed than hid her," and it is one of the attractions of lawn tennis that it admits of this self-expression. There is the pose for the service; you must have the right clothes for that, and not even on the stage can you show them off to so many people at once as on the Centre Court. In the days when women served, in a deprecating Victorian way, underhand, however well they played, they were discussed only among people who understood the technicalities of the game. In that day, too, women in a mixed double stayed at home on the base-line like good Victorians while the men did the prancing at the net; now the man runs back for the woman's lobs as well as his own. He might be chosen as they say dancing partners are—not for his own prowess, but to show the woman off, and the women crowd the stands to see the triumph of their sex.

As factors in this triumph, clothes and skill are inextricably mixed. If you have the skill, it is said to be easier to acquire the clothes, at any rate parents and guardians are more likely to provide them; and if you have the clothes it is your duty to yourself to acquire the skill that will enable you to exhibit them—so all things work together. In fact, it is a double triumph that lawn tennis may be made to yield to women. For one thing, it is the only sport in which thousands of women may see a woman apparently holding her own with men in their own sphere of physical activity. In a single against another woman she makes no more mistakes than were made by the men in the previous match. In a mixed double strength of body and staying power—points in which men have the better of it—are not obviously the determining influence, the less so that her partner does the running.

In a book just published, "Listening to Lacoste," by J. Pollock, the champion puts woman in her place with French logic. A single at its best is an all-round game in which the drive is supplemented by the volley:

For ladies the volley is practically useless. . . . The reason for that lies not in any inferiority in skill . . . but solely in a woman's smaller physical means. She plays on a court the same size as that for men, and a man can hardly cover it so as to volley persistently — obviously therefore a woman cannot.

Browbeating a Man

But inferiority is the last word that would occur to a spectator when watching one of the lady experts of today brow-beating the man opposite in a mixed—most gratifying spectacle to her own sex.

The other triumph is gained among women by wearing clothes that they would have liked to have thought of first. For what is Mlle. Lenglen most famous? For her balance? No. For her bandeau. The writer has reason to know. All writers make blunders at times: and he has made his share, and kind friends have rubbed them in so hard as that which he committed when on the first appearance of the bandeau he referred to it in his ignorance of the subtleties of the game as a "fillet." It ended by his beginning every conversation with "Yes, I know, Bandeau; it was the printers—maddening people printers."

But the painful incident taught him to appreciate values at lawn tennis—as did overhearing this condemnation of Mr. Burrow: "She put on a fresh frock every day and was never once played on the Centre Court."

TENNIS TOURNAMENT

Semi-Finals Played Last Evening. —Games Will Be Continued Over Week-End.

In the semi-final of the city championship men's singles tournament last night Marentette beat White 6-2, 6-0. Marentette will meet the winner of the Carmichael vs. Joslin game, scheduled for tomorrow morning, in the final next week.

Carmichael and Campbell beat Howard and Smith in men's doubles and will meet Robertson and Marentette in the finals.

Miss Mitchell beat Mrs. Stepp 6-1, 6-0 in the ladies' singles and will meet Miss Riel in the finals.

SPORT CHAT

John McCormack is not only a gerat singer but he is something of a tennis expert. Despite the fact that the world-famous tenor is not a featherweight, he is surprisingly agile and at tennis he displays a wicked serve, a mean overhead, a terrific forehand drive and a jovial disposition.

The performance of Jack Fournier this week in making three home runs in a single game with the St. Louis Cardinals takes the baseball minds for a while off the home run proclivities of Babe Ruth. In spite of the fact that he had been weakened by an injury that brought a long layoff, Fournier slammed out the three circuit clouts to tie the modern Major League record.
