Discreditable Campaign Abuse and Slander

Under the heading, "A Discreditable Campaign," the Ottawa Citizen says:

The great Conservative party of Canada, headed by Right as long as they are not nuts. Hon. Arthur Meighen, one of the most rejected and dejected political leaders in the whole Dominion, has, from the beginning Tomorrow's Friday and Ive of the present contest, placed all its hopes of victory in a cam-got to eat fish again. I hope it's paign of abuse of the late Liberal government. It has sagacity not a sucker. enough to know that there are in this country, as in most others, a large number of electors who usually vote against something and rarely for anything, and that these electors are sufficiently is it takes less gas. That's dif strong to be able to swing the election by their negativism.

Thus the Tory strategists decided that the only hope they uses more gas. had of securing sufficient members in parliament of their own color to gain office lay in arousing these negative electors to vote, not for the Conservatives, but against the Liberal party, ference between the parties, so pert interlock," declared the And so a campaign of bitter accusation against the Liberal government was begun. The first shot was fired by Mr. Meighen at that? in Ottawa, when the greater part of his speech was taken up in telling the people of Canada what a corrupt and depraved lot of masqueraders the Liberals were.

Platform Excesses of Conservatives.

Had the Conservative speakers confined themselves to the evidence brought out in radio set to make worse noises? ways so that it might become trithe investigation, none could have genuine cause for complaint. But they immediately began indulging in those platform excesses that are calculated to prejudice rather than convince, and before summer. long the country was flooded with tales of vile character, with stories of joy-sails and unmentionable goings-on, and with insinuations reflecting upon the honor and integrity of Liberal members.

What is it the Conservative orators hope to gain by this campaign slander? Already the most notorious of these utterances have been nailed and they have rebounded to the discredit of thing. So it is, by Jove. It looks ver with their unexcelled scenic the utterers. There were the Doucet aspersions. Mr. Doucet good to me and they say Stork attractions. As for Prince Rusays the Quebec inquiry proved his "Margaret" charges were true. Can Mr. Doncet or his apologists deny Stork and Brady on the same terest be aroused in developing it that, however free from specific charges his craftily worded political platform. So would I, along those lines. It should not statements were, they were intended to besmirch the moral char-only they could not both talk at be all left for the government or acter of Liberal leaders? But the inquiry, ordered by the Con-lonce. servative government, revealed that there was no incident on board the "Margaret" which could be a repreach against the persons named by the Tory Doucet.

Another Inustration.

Equally interesting is an illustration of Conservative campaign tactics was the statement made by Mr. Nicholson at North get any Conservative money on Bay. This former member of the House of Commons, speaking ine elections. on the same platform as Mr. Meighen, was reported as stating that one of the chief public buildings in Ottawa was "partially turned into a bawdy house" and that "the keeper of the bawdy goes on writing some of those up the Stikine River through a house was on the payroll of the country at $3,500 a year." When scathing editorials, some of his this astounding and vile utterance was reported in the press of faithful followers will pluck Canada and caused justifiable resentment, Mr. Nicholson indig-courage enough to venture nantly denied that he had said it, and he personally telegraphed dime on Brady. to The Citizen to give his denial the same publicity as was given! the original allegation. The Citizen gave it greater publicity.

But to this denial, the Canadian Press correspondent who cinch on all the virtues, watch to the work being done among the reported the speech, and who is one of the most reliable men in hem. that most reliable news service, replied that he actually submitted to Mr. Nicholson a note asking if the denied statement was correct, with "Ottawa" specially underlined, and that Mr. Nicholson wrote "yes" on the note. "I still have the note," says | the Canadian Press reporter.

But in Ontario, awarded the D.S.O. as has also too, except in the case of the congenial ultra-Tories, there is Major C. W. Peck. The letter to the beautiful Massett Inlet per charge for handling that likely to be a reaction against the Conservative muck-rakers, also refers to Capt. J. A. "Don't go to Vancouver for your next holiday trip. Go to the Stikine River country, the Peace River valley, Stuart or Ootsa Lake, to the interior or the Islands. Know the beauty, the resources, the prosperity of your own country tributary to the city." Such was the advice given by Archdeacon Rix at the Gyro Club yesterday in concluding an address, illustrated with many photographs, in which he revealed the scenic splendor and tremendous natural resources of many parts of Central and Northern British Columbia as seen by himself during the past two years in the course of his travels through the diocese of Caledonia, which extends from the Alberta border to the Queen Charlotte Islands and boundary.
