WASHING GOLD FROM GRAVEL IN YUKON

VICTORIA, Aug. 26.—The Russell Creek hydraulic mines, owned by a group of Victorians and operating in the Yukon, are now under full operation, according to the report of Major Nevill A. D. Armstrong, chief of operations, made to the head office and issued here today to shareholders of R. G. Christy.

The monitors are now working on wash gravel which the hand tests show yield from 25 cents to $1.30 gold a pan. The clean-up just completed at the time the report was prepared at the end of June showed a return of ten ounces of gold per 150 square feet or at the rate of $1.20 per square foot.

"This would be considered rich ground almost anywhere, I think," Major Armstrong says in his official report. "There are sixteen respectable looking nuggets in the clean-up. It is paystreak gold, but we have not yet reached the source from which it originally came."

The new sluices were completed on June 30, and are 60 feet in length, Major Armstrong reports. The monitor throws a powerful head of water 200 feet from the nozzle.

BURNED FROM CURLING HAIR ELECTRIC IRONS

EDMONTON, Aug. 25.—Thinking that the night was unusually warm, a young lady, living in a residence on the South Side, languidly awoke out of her beauty sleep to find her bed in flames. Her shrill screams for aid brought the others in the house to her room on the jump. The young lady had been curling her hair with a pair of electric curling irons and had left them on the bed with the juice still running when she went to sleep. She was not seriously injured.

GOSSIP OF NEW YORK STREETS

About Glad Hand, Bootleggers, Magazines, Strange Commodities, Policemen, and Skyscrapers

New York has developed a "glad hand complex." The metropolis, now awarded the title "the greatest port on earth," has to live up to the reputation for hospitality enjoyed by the whole nation. Royalty, explorers, inventors, conquistadors of sport, princes of the church and celebrities in orders not so holy are welcomed with verve and eclat by bands, flags, ticker tape showers, syrens and fire tugs spouting water. But New Yorkers do not do it all—delegations from other cities and states frequently participate.

Such is the varied demand for magazines in New York that a stand in one of the large subway terminals keeps 500 different publications on his racks. Not all are fiction or popular magazines, however. Many of the publications are trade journals with limited circulations.

Enterprising New York bootleggers are soliciting customers by mail. Their mailing lists, however, are limited to persons who have been recommended. One speakeasy sent out handsomely engraved invitations. They bore the names of the proprietors, but not their address. On the envelope was a mail return address which led the recipient of an invitation to the residence of a man who would direct him to the location of the speakeasy.

It caused a crowd of pedestrians to collect. Policemen flourishing their night sticks, hurried to see what the trouble was. The gathering crowd caused passing taxis and trucks to swerve to the left. Fingers pointed and eyes opened in wonder. It was hailed as "a sight for sore eyes." Such is the excitement a lone butterfly can cause at the busy corner of 42nd Street and Lexington Avenue.

New Yorkers not only demand that The American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals exterminate their erstwhile pets, but many of them ask to see the bodies afterwards, and thus assure themselves that Fido was not used for vivisection purposes.

The Orient and the South Sea Isles send strange commodities to the New York port, where daily import lists record the arrival of everything from human hair stumps from Shanghai, to shark meat from the British West Indies.

From distant Singapore comes latex, liquid rubber sap. Macassar supplies hair oil, bringing to mind again the days of antimacassars, the doilies grandmother used to use to keep the cover-stuffed chairs spotless.

Divi divi, and agar agar sound like eastern versions of Walla Walla, but they are, in reality, tropical imports used respectively for tanning processes and germ cultures.

Jelutong is the basic component of chewing gum, while the mysterious sounding shuyu, from Yokahama, turns out to be a humble soy bean, used in this country for forage, but used in its indigent habitant as good.

"Rich man, poor man, beggar man, thief"—all meet in Madison Square.

The old Madison Square Garden is gone and its plot soon will hold another skyscraper, but the square with its greenery and trees and fountain still remain. So do its habitues.

The small park is laid out with irregular walks beneath the shadow of the Metropolitan Life Building, and the benches form continuous rows along the fences.

Morning and afternoon in warm weather they are packed, while other hundreds of persons wander about. Prosperity sits next to a man in tatters.

It is the rendezvous of idlers to a large extent, but it also is the one place of natural relaxation for thousands whose daily lives are spent around the square.

GOOD SALMON SEASON KETCHIKAN DISTRICT

Commissioner of Fisheries Says Only a Few Lost Money This Year.

KETCHIKAN, Aug. 26.—Henry O'Malley, commissioner of fisheries, and Lawrence Ritchie, assistant to Secretary of Commerce Hoover, went north after visiting in Ketchikan. Both are pleased wit hthe healthy condition of the salmon fisheries as shown by the operations just closed.

"Generally speaking," said Mr. O'Malley, "the pack is good. The run of salmon has been excellent in Southeastern Alaska. On the west coast of Prince of Walse Island, in the northern section, there was an excellent run. It was not quite so heavy at the south end of the island. It appears that all of the canneries in Ketchikan have done well, and the independent fishermen have made money. There are but a few who have lost, and it could not be said that their losses were due to any scarcity of salmon."

Mr. Ritchie made the trip from Seattle on the new fisheries boat Brandt and expressed himself as much pleased with it. He said the boat was comfortable, had good speed and was of sufficient size to ply any waters.

All Nerves!

All nerves! What a common expression! In this busy era with the problems of home management, club activities, and even political affairs crowding her day, how often the housewife complains of nervousness, headache, backache and general fatigue.

These symptoms of ill-feeling are often due to strained eye muscles and nerves which can be relieved by properly fitted glasses.
