FORMER LOCAL GIRL MARRIES

MISS DORIS PATTULLO, DAUGHTER
OF MINISTER OF LANDS, WEDS
CLIFFORD STUART COLLISON

A wedding of much interest in Prince Rupert owing to the fact that the bride lived in Prince Rupert for many years during early girlhood, took place in Christ Church Cathedral, Victoria, last Wednesday evening, when Miss Lillian Doris Pattullo, only daughter of Hon. T. D. Pattullo, minister of lands and member of the legislature for Prince Rupert, and Mrs. Pattullo, became the bride of Clifford Stuart Collison, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Collison, The Up-lands, Victoria.

A profusion of pink and white chrysanthemums and dahlias covering the choir screens and flanked on either side by graceful palms, together with an archway of pink and white chrysanthemums, comprised the unusually beautiful floral setting for the wedding.

The church was filled with a large congregation to witness the ceremony, which was performed by Very Rev. Cecil S. Quanlton, Dean of Columbia.

Mr. Pattullo gave away his daughter, who looked a picture of radiant loveliness in her exquisite gown of white georgette heavily encircled with silver and iridescent paillettes all over the long waisted sleeveless bodice, while on the full skirt with its scalloped hemline similar paillettes traced a conventional design. Her filmy veil of tulle and Carrickmacross lace was arranged in cap fashion, with a bandeau of Carrickmacross lace outlined in orange blossom buds and tiny pearls to hold it in place. She carried an exquisite rose-point lace handkerchief, an heirloom of her mother's, and a beautiful bouquet of pink roses, lilies of the valley and orchids completed the bridal toilette.

Pervenue blue to deep rose were the shades chosen for the gowns of the four bridesmaids. Miss Dorothy Holmes, Miss Helen Macdonald, Miss Elsie Taylor and Miss Katie Collison, sister of the bridegroom. The gowns were fashioned alike of georgette with long straight bodies, a soft drapery falling from the right shoulder, while on the full flared skirts the hemline was marked by a broad band of shaded velvet to tone. Their picture hats of georgette to match the frocks were adorned with silver leaves and French flowers, and each carried sheaves of pink chrysanthemums.

The groom was attended by Dr. S. G. Kenning, and the ushers were Mr. Norman Whittaker, Mr. Bert Collison and Mr. Noel Collison. During the signing of the register, Mrs. Jessie Longfield sang "Bridal Dawn."

THE RECEPTION

After the ceremony the many guests attended a reception at the home of the bride's parents on Newport Avenue, where they were received by Mrs. Pattullo wearing a beautiful gown of black and gold.

The drawing and sun rooms were beautifully arranged with masses of pale, pink chrysanthemums, the young couple receiving the felicitations of the guests beneath an archway of pink and white chrysanthemums.

In the dining room, where supper was served a handsome three-tier wedding cake centred the table, flanked on either side with silver vases of roses and tall pinwheels in silver sconces.

Hon. John Oliver proposed the toast to the bride, and Dr. Kenning that of the bridesmaids. The young couple were the recipients of many beautiful wedding gifts, including a beautiful silver tea and coffee service from the cabinet ministers and their wives, and a handsome mahogany clock from the staff of the Lands Department at the Parliament Buildings. Mr. and Mrs. Collison left for Vancouver whence they will motor to Portland for their honeymoon, the bride travelling in a French gown of crackle-edge blue, with sealskin coat trimmed with squirrel and a close-fitting black hat. On their return they will reside on Dennison Road, Gonzales Heights.

CHILLY Fall temperatures are making many throats sore, hoarse and irritated.

A chill gives the opening to bronchitis, and to the dangerous germs of many other respiratory diseases.

The quickest and best remedy is in the real breathe-able Peps tablets which, as they dissolve on the tongue, give off medicinal fumes that pass with the breath into the furthest recesses of the lungs. Peps carry healing and health wherever they go.

They put a speedy end to pain and irritation and soothe and heal inner recesses which gargles and ordinary throat tablets never touch.

Carry a few of these silver-jacketed Peps-tablets loose in the pocket. Take one whenever the first sign of "throatness" appears. A Peps in the mouth every hour or so, filters the air you breathe and protects against infection dangers.

INJECTION-KILLING TABLETS

black and gold, and Mrs. Collison, mother of the groom, who was handsomely gowned in black georgette beaded in gold and a hat of black and gold.

With a piercing scream for aid from her man, the dauntless girl faced the bear, which advanced on the woman with menacing growls. Jules, catching sight of one of the cubs as he came running through the underbrush, and ignorant of the fact that its mother was also there, took a quick snapshot and broke the cub's neck. It rolled towards its parent, uttering plaintive moans, while the blood gushed out of its mouth.

Raising itself on its hind legs, the bear made a lunge at the squaw. With desperate bravery, the squaw leaped up her axe. Measuring her distance, she brought the weapon crashing down on to the skull of the bear which fell dead at her feet, just as the trapper ran up and caught her fainting form in his arms.

Leaving Summit Lake in a twenty-seven foot boat, with an outboard engine, the party made slow progress down the Crooked River, owing to extremely low water. The boat had to be dragged over portions of the trip. The party ran into a heavy snowstorm near Red Rock Lake and under extremely hazardous conditions McLeod Lake was reached next morning.

As the party was proceeding down the Parsnip River, the boat was swamped, all occupants being thrown into the water. Throughout the day, the voyageurs labored under difficulties in salvaging the equipment that might be used again. Some coffee and wet bread were all the provisions that were saved.

Every member of the party lost his personal belongings, including their arms and fishing tackle. They had no means of killing game for food.

The boat was hung up on a sweeper and the following day the party floated down to a trapper's cabin, where they tasted their first meal in thirty-six hours. The party then proceeded to Finlay Forks where the boat was abandoned and later they reached the outskirts of civilization, after passing through several snow storms and bitter winds. The temperature hovered around zero at many points of their journey.

According to Judge Robertson it was the most trying trip he had made during the eleven years he has been dispensing justice in the northland.

MOTHER FOUGHT FURIOUS BEAR

OPPORTUNE ARRIVAL OF TRAPPER
HUSBAND SAVED YOUNG WIFE AND BABY

EPIC STORY

Trapper and Family Were Picking Berries When Animal Arrived

EDMONTON, Oct. 23.—How a frail girl-mother battled to the death with an enraged she-bear—both in defence of their offspring—is told by Jules LaFlamme, half-breed trapper from the headwaters of the Porcupine river.

Accompanied by his 17-year-old squaw, Jules set out from his cabin one day in the early fall to gather berries before the snow got too deep. The girl carried her baby in a pack-sack on her back, and her only weapon was an axe which she wore in her belt.

Proceeding up a deep coulee in which snow from an earlier storm still lay on the ground, the pair separated; Jules to hunt for a good place to run his line and discover patches of berries, and the girl to pick them.

PORED AXE IN HOLE

At the base of a monster spruce, the wife found a big hole. Hanging the child from a protecting branch, she poked the axe-handle down into hole to see what might be in there.

She soon found out. With a loud "Woof!" a big black bear emerged from the hole followed by a pair of cubs. Its small, piggish eyes blazing with hate, the enraged mother of the cubs advanced on the frightened mother of the babe, which swung on the tree a few feet from the bear.

With a piercing scream for aid from her man, the dauntless girl faced the bear, which advanced on the woman with menacing growls. Jules, catching sight of one of the cubs as he came running through the underbrush, and ignorant of the fact that its mother was also there, took a quick snapshot and broke the cub's neck. It rolled towards its parent, uttering plaintive moans, while the blood gushed out of its mouth.
