SCOTTISH SABBATH UNDER DISCUSSION

Lord Inchcape Precipitates Avalanche of Letters in Glasgow Herald

Christian people in Scotland have been quite stirred this summer by a widespread discussion of the old question of Sabbath observance says the Toronto Globe. The agitation was precipitated by an article by Lord Inchcape published on the editorial page of the Glasgow Herald. This article was only a few hundred words in length, but it resulted in an unexpected avalanche of letters. As Lord Inchcape is well known as a very successful business man, the head of a great shipping enterprise, a director of the Suez Canal, and a man of cosmopolitan experiences and observations, his words naturally carried weight. Two weeks after his article was published, the Herald announced that it would have to bring the discussion to a close so far as its columns were concerned. The closing instalment of published letters filled more than four full columns of the paper, and the editors stated that, in addition to the nearly one hundred letters which they had printed, several hundreds more had come to hand.

Other Papers Such publicity on this ancient and at the same time modern and vital question could not be confined to one newspaper. The British Weekly took the matter up, and undoubtedly good has resulted from the focusing of attention on one of God's pivotal provisions for mankind. Lord Inchcape was rather severe in his criticisms of "certain reverend Scottish parsons," and radical in his suggestions for Sabbath observance. He says he was "brought up in the narrow atmosphere of the Scottish Sabbath," and "I certainly do not look back with much pleasure to the Sabbath restraints to which when a youth I was subjected." He believes, after "knocking about the world for fifty years," that people in other parts of the world who are free from Scotland's "bondage" are not more wicked than those of his native land. He would like to see church services commence at 10 o'clock or 10:30, and last for not more than an hour, "leaving the people free for the rest of the day to indulge in rational recreation."

For and Against

Some of the many letters published by The Glasgow Herald have expressed agreement with Lord Inchcape's position, but the frank protests and earnest objections to his article have been significant and distinctly encouraging.

CHEEK SLASHING IS ALLOWED IN GERMANY

Courth Decide that it is Legal to Develop Nerve by Slicing Each Other

BERLIN, April 29.—Mensur, or student cheek-slashing, is not properly duelling, and cannot be condemned as such, according to judgment pronounced in the Heidelberg court.

The sudden arrest of a number of students a short time ago in an historical student tavern in Heidelberg on the strength of a Parliamentary decision that student duelling was included in the anti-duelling law alarmed duelling students throughout Germany, since it would have destroyed the time honored institution of student drinking and duelling corps.

A deputation of students this week proceeded to Potsdam, visited the grave of Frederick the Great at Sans-Souci, and later visited the aviation field, where they were addressed by Dr. Eckener, to whom the students had promised financial and moral support for the coming North Pole flight.

Warren Oxley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Oxley, formerly of Anyox, was a passenger aboard the Princess Royal today going through from Vancouver to the Telegraph Creek mineral district where he will spend the summer. His father has been spending the winter in the Atlin district where he is engaged in mine development work.

The whaling steamer Gray, which lighted the stranded C.P.R. steamer Princess Ena of her cargo on the west coast of Vancouver Island, arrived from there at 1:30 this afternoon and is tied up at the ocean dock preparatory to proceeding to Kelchikan and other Alaska ports at 6 o'clock this evening.

"Imaginary" Rheumatism Caused by Illfitting Shoes

MANY, many times physicians have diagnosed what appears to be rheumatism, as really being pains arising from the effects of Fallen Arches.

This condition brings on general muscular weakness—the ligaments are strained, interfering with proper nourishment of the foot. The circulation becomes poor—attendant symptoms appear—numbness, cold, and at times, undue perspiration.
