Political Situation in Dominion as Whole.

What they expect will happen in the country as a whole sometimes influences individuals in casting their own votes in an election. Many people think that it is advantageous to have their member of the same political stripe as the party in power. To a certain extent the theory is warranted though, of course, there would be no necessary opposition if all members were on the government side. Surveys of the political possibilities in the country are therefore always interesting. As far as Canada is concerned it looks like a pretty good Liberal chance. It is difficult to perceive where the Conservatives are going to strengthen themselves, but it is easy to see where the Liberals may make gains.

Seems Little Hope For Conservatives.

As despatches, newspapers and personal letters from all parts of Canada begin to pour into the various political headquarters and comparisons of their viewpoints are made it is becoming apparent, now that the first excitement attendant upon the dissolution of parliament has passed, that Premier Meighen will have just as great difficulty in getting his new and short-lived ministry endorsed by the electors as he did by parliament. The majority may be proportionally not much greater than in parliament, but it seems inevitable that it must be on the wrong side for him.

Where Liberals Expect to Gain.

A careful survey of the eastern situation leads to the conclusion that the Liberal forces can count on a gain of about 12 seats east of the Great Lakes.

As this gain is entirely at the expense of the Conservative party it changes the respective strengths (leaving the West exactly as it stands) from 115 Conservatives and 101 Liberals to 113 Liberals and 103 Conservatives.

With the collapse of the Progressive party and the notable tendency to agreement for the elimination of three-cornered contests in the prairie provinces, to say nothing of the defection of the powerful Rogers faction from the Conservative side, the prairies look like almost a clean sweep for Mackenzie King.

Recovery of the five seats in Saskatchewan, of all the rural constituencies of Manitoba and two seats in British Columbia is confidently expected in Liberal circles.

Alberta, where the powerful U. F. A. group is still strongly entrenched, is the most difficult province to size up, but there is no hope in the Conservative camp of making any progress there, so that the Mackenzie King government should be back in the saddle with a majority over all after September 14.

GOVERNOR OF BERMUDA LIKES SALMON FISHING

So He is on His Way to Campbell River, Where He Will Satisfy His Fancy.

WINNIPEG, July 27. — Lieut. Gen. Sir John Asser, governor of Bermuda, has a taste for Canadian salmon and, in order to engage in his favorite recreation, he is now on his way to Campbell River, B. C. Sir John passed through here last night on the Continental Limited of the Canadian National, and reported that, during a short visit in Montreal enroute, he called on Sir Henry Thornton, whom he had been close to in France during the Great War.

As honorary president of the Tyee Club of Campbell River, Sir John has visited British Columbia before and is very keen on the salmon fishing available in that part of Vancouver Island, which is one hundred miles north of Victoria.

SAYS RAILWAY FARES TOO HIGH

Sydney Browning, of New Hazelton, Gives This As His Opinion.

That railway fares, both passenger and freight, are much too high on the northern Canadian National lines and as a consequence are retarding the volume of traffic which would otherwise accrue to the railway is the opinion of Sydney Browning, principal of the Indian School at New Hazelton, who is in the city on a short holiday visit.

Mr. Browning states that the passenger fares as at present set by the Canadian National are not equitable and cited, as an example, the cost of a round-trip ticket between Hazelton and Vancouver as against the cost of a round-trip ticket on the triangular run taking in Vancouver, Jasper Park, Prince Rupert and return to Vancouver. The former fare costs $61.50 for the round-trip, a distance of some 1,360 miles, whereas the latter fare only costs $48.50, a distance of some 1,750 miles.

Mr. Browning's idea is that the Canadian National should inaugurate a local railway motor train service between Prince George and this city, one unit travelling west and one unit travelling east. According to statistics the motor train is the cheapest form of unit operated on the railways at the present time and should enable the railway company to quote low local rates on both passenger and freight traffic. Mr. Browning says there are many people in the interior who would use the railway to a far greater extent if cheaper fares were in force and many farmers who would ship their produce to Prince Rupert if a lower freight rate were in existence.

Many Indians he stated, congregated around Hazelton during the month of July from the Babine and northern territories, and many of them would take advantage of a low fare to come into the city and make purchases.

Roads Important

Mr. Browning is also an ardent supporter for the building of a road to connect between Prince Rupert and the interior country. So many men, he states, now own automobiles that the volume of motor traffic is expanding fast, and only by the building of a good trunk highway between the interior towns can this desirable traffic be encouraged.

TO MAKE LONG TRIP FOR GOLD

Rumor Has It That Stuart Henderson, K.C., Has Second Purpose as Well in North.

Stuart Henderson, K. C., well known Victoria lawyer, arrived in the city on board the Prince Charles yesterday afternoon on his way to Hazelton from which point he will leave on a 600-mile gold seeking trip of several weeks into central and northern British Columbia. Mr. Henderson will be accompanied on this long trip by Simon Gun-a-noot, the famous Indian whom he successfully defended several years ago on a murder charge.

There are few white men in British Columbia whose word and counsel are respected by the Babine Indians like that of Gun-a-noot's lawyer. Although the trip, which they are about to undertake is principally concerned with a quest for minerals, undiscovered by previous prospectors, it is rumored that Mr. Henderson has also been asked to settle differences which have caused discontent for years past among some of the tribes.

With Gun-a-noot as guide, two other Indians, and a train of ten pack horses, Mr. Henderson will leave Hazelton for a secret destination in the interior. The lawyer has amassed a fund of information about the country he proposes to examine, and if there is any gold he expects to find it. He will be away about two months on the trip.
