3 PROP WASH...

By LORNE STEPHENS

(Beginning today, this column "Prop Wash" will be a regular Monday feature rounding up activities of the Prince Rupert Aero Club and amateur flying—Editor.)

The Aero Club floats were busy Saturday and Sunday with an increase in flying owing to the good weather.

Joe Goscoe made good use of conditions, doing his first solo hop and followed it up again in the afternoon with another half-hour's flying.

John Fredericks is champing at the bit to get his remaining few hours in for his private license, while George Allard is running a close second and is ready to make his solo cross-country.

A new member, George West, has made his initial flight with the Club.

The Club's sympathies are extended to Cliff Taylor over the recent mishap to "Pansy."

Preparations are underway for another dance in November for the Club's members when the boys and their guests get together for a little low flying. Meanwhile, CAVU.

CYO Plans Dance For Hallowe'en

Plans for the coming Hallowe'en dance to be held on Wednesday were discussed at the CYO general meeting last night and arrangements are well in hand, reported John Laporte, in charge of the dance committee.

Activities were handled according to the plan learned by the delegates to Banff this summer. Lively discussions were held under four separate headings: Spiritual, Apostolic, Educational and Social.

Unded educational, pros and cons of hospital insurance were discussed. Most agreed that compulsory hospital insurance is a good thing provided that it is impartial to all.

A CYO committee was formed to promote the Catholic publication, the "B.C. Catholic," and Mary Zogas was appointed to replace Martin Nuyten on the library committee.

Father Mohan, organizer and chaplain for the young people, attended the meeting.

Past president Joanne Kofeod was presented with a gift of flowers when she left last week to reside in California. The gift was approved by the members and all agreed Miss Kofeod had done an excellent job while in office.

President Martin Nuyten was chairman of the meeting.

African Tells Canadians of Colony Life

Miss Chela, a young and vivacious Negro, came on the invitation of the Women's Missionary Society of the United Church in Canada to tell audiences about the work their mission service is accomplishing in her country.

EDMONTON —Africa has sent a missionary to Canada. She is Miss Maria Chela who came from the village of Chissamba in Angola province of Portuguese West Africa to make a coast-to-coast tour.

She holds a teaching certificate in Portuguese and is matron of the girls' boarding school in Chissamba where she teaches sewing and basketry, plans recreation and leads worship services.

In Canada she is travelling with Miss Margaret Dawson who is on her third furlough to Canada after 17 years in Angola with the United Church mission. She taught school in Lundy's Lane near Niagara Falls, Ont., before going to Africa.

Miss Chela speaks English but prefers to address public gatherings in Umbundu, the native dialect. Miss Dawson acts as interpreter.

She is intrigued by the number of schools in Canada. At home, Miss Chela said, people want to learn but there are few schools or teachers. As a little girl she walked five miles to attend a mission school.

Miss Dawson said part of the work of missionaries is to raise the standard of African village life so that the people may come to the stage where they themselves can take over.
