UNION OIL CO. AT KETCHIKAN

Work Commenced on Tanks of 20,000 Gallon Capacity; Tanker to Moor There

KETCHIKAN, Feb. 25.—With the arrival of 40 tons of structural steel for the local plant of the Union Oil Co., workmen commenced preparations for the erection of four tanks, each of 20,000 gallon capacity. A steel working crew arrived from the south on the Victoria to build the tanks.

The tanks to be erected will be for use in accommodating the shore business of the company only and deliveries to marine customers will be made from the tank steamer Radiant, expected to arrive here from the south late this month. Deliveries ashore will be made from the tanks at the station or by auto truck, two of which have been ordered for the plant here.

Construction of the wharf and moorings for the Radiant will be commenced possibly this week, officials of the company said. Contract for the driving of the piling has been let to the Over Reach Pile Driver Co. and they plan to start work immediately upon the arrival of creosoted piling from the states.

Rushing Work

Work on the new plant is being rushed as much as possible and it is the aim of the company to have their local station in operation as soon after March 1 as possible, J. W. Bennett, chief construction engineer for the company, announced.

Upon completion of the work here, the crew of steel workers and others of the construction force, will commence on one of the five other Southeastern Alaskan stations of the company, the location of which have not been made public as yet.

ENGLISH NAVIGATOR FIRST EXPLORER IN NORTH POLAR REGION

John Davis (or Davys), an English navigator, born at Sandridge, near Dartmouth, England, is the first recorded polar explorer, states The Mentor. Between 1585 and 1588 he undertook three voyages to the northern seas in an effort to find a northwest passage. In the first of these he discovered the strait that bears his name; it separates Greenland from Cumberland Peninsula and connects Baffin Bay with the Atlantic. His voyages extended along the west Greenland coast as far as Upernavik, and along the American side of the strait as far as Labrador. Davis afterward made five voyages to the East Indies, in the last of which he was killed in a fight with Japanese pirates near Sumatra.

DANCING GIRL AND A PRINCE

Commission to Investigate Depends on Attitude of Native Ruler

DELHI, Feb. 25—In connection with the proposed commission to investigate the connection of the Maharajah of Indore with the attempted abduction of the dancing girl Mumtaz Begum and the murder of a Bombay merchant, the commission, if appointed, will consist of two High Court judges, two ruling princes, and a senior officer of the Political Department. The procedure which will be followed is that which is laid down as the result of a recommendation made in Paragraph 309 of the Montagu-Chelmsford Report for cases where the question arises of depriving a ruler temporarily or permanently of any of his powers or privileges. The function of the committee is to investigate the facts of the case and to offer advice to the government of India.

Whenever the Governor General decides that a case has arisen for the appointment of a court of inquiry the ruler concerned has the option of intimating that he does not desire that the commission should be appointed.

The Maharajah of Indore has ben informed of the conclusion at which the Governor General has arrived.

The Government Policy

Hitherto, while there have ben allegations suggesting that the Maharajah was connected with the attempted adbuction of Mumtaz Begum, which resulted in the death of Bawla, the Maharajah himself maintains that he was entirely unaware of or concerned in the plot. The government of India have therefore adopted a cautious and considered course which should not be open to criticism from the Prince concerned or from the Princes in general. The strongest point in support of the government's attitude is their stand on the Montagu - Chelmsford Report, which has been accepted on all hands as offering the proper guide on various intricate matters of high state policy.

Nor, it is pointed out, can the Maharajah complain that the commission of inquiry to find out whether there is a basis for his alleged connection with the abduction of Mumtaz Begum will not be a competent impartial body, for it will consist of two High Court judges, two of his peers—namely, ruling princes—and a senior officer of the Political Department, who would provide expert departmental advice.

The Maharajah's Attitude

The government, however, has not announced the personnel because, although they are in favor of such an inquiry, they have left it to the Maharajah of Indore to decide whether he desires an inquiry or not. If the Maharajah favors an inquiry urgent steps will be taken to constitute the commission. The government communication also which the commission will follow makes it clear that the procedure will be as if a case had arisen to see whether a ruling prince was to be deprived, either temporarily or permanently, of any of his powers and privileges.

If, however, the Maharajah, who has already been informed of the government's decision declines to have a commission of inquiry, there is not the slightest foundation for the suggestion that such refusal will be immediately followed by compulsory abdication. In such a contingency the government will have to consider how best to arrive at a proper decision in the matter, and the government may, therefore, have to hold an inquiry of its own accord and collect further material before deciding what course of action is justified by the case.

TAME ROBINS PERCH ON VISITORS' HEADS

Lady Near Winnipeg Tells How the Young Were Raised by Hand and Called by Bell

WINNIPEG, Feb. 25.—Would you not be surprised if, when walking up the driveway to a house, several robins flew around you and perched on your head and shoulders? Such was the experience last summer of many visitors to Mrs. K. J. McDougal's home in East Kildonan, and the story of how the robins were tamed was recently told by Mrs. McDougal to the Natural History Society.

The baby robins were almost fledged and were placed in a large cage on the porch. At first they were fed on earthworms, but it took all the spare time of the family and of visitors as well to dig enough worms to satisfy them, so they were gradually changed to a diet of baked custard. "Making custard," said Mrs. McDougal, "being much less strenuous than digging for worms, especially so when the robins grew older and a custard of four eggs and two cups of milk lasted them less than 24 hours." The birds were kept in the cage for about a week, and to train them to know their feeding times, each meal was announced by a truly modern bell, a tin can and a can opener.

GREATEST NATION IS NOT MOST WARLIKE

Colonel George O. Fallis Te ls Victoria People Problems of Peace Greater than War

VICTORIA, Feb. 25. — "The time has passed when boys and girls should be taught that the greatest nation is the one that has the largest army. Rather should they be taught that the greatest nation is the one that gives the greatest service not to its own country alone but to the whole world." This is the lesson which Col. George O. Fallis, of Vancouver, presented to the gathering in the Metropolitan Institute recently in his address upon the subject of "The Problem of World Peace."

"I am not a pacifist at any price," said he, early in his address. Those who believe that the problem of war could be settled overnight were among the greatest enemies of peace. War, said Col. Fallis, could not be wiped out in that way. He agreed with the remarks of Sir George Foster at the recent meeting of the Canadian Council of the League of Nations which he had just attended at Ottawa, when the statesman said that the problems of peace were almost as great to settle as the problems of democracy.

ARE YOU WEARING The Right Shoe?

Up till a recent date, the shoe trade has been devoting its energies to the improvement of quality and style of shoes, never giving any consideration to the feet. But now, a new leaf has been turned and the manufacturers are going hand in hand with science. They now understand that

The Shoes are to Fit the Feet and not The Feet to Fit the Shoes

That is why you find that the demand for a scientifically made shoe such as the Arch-defender Shoe, is increasing every day, as well as scientific appliances for the relief of foot ailments, as Dr. Scholl's.

With that aim in view I decided to learn more about the feet and have concluded a special practipedic course that enables me to give you an absolute satisfaction in shoe fitting as well as relieving you of your foot ailments, if you have any.

Yours for Scientific Shoe Fitting
