BRITISH GENERAL STRIKE EFFECTIVE

TRAINS, TRAMS AND BUSES NOW TIED UP EVERYWHERE

British Transportation Tied Up by General Strike Which Went Into Force Throughout Kingdom

Good trains continue to operate and in some places volunteers are taking places of those who left their work

WELSH MINERS SING RED FLAG

LONDON, May 4.—Labor's first attempt to tie up the industrial life of Britain was mainly successful at the inception of strike at midnight. The government's emergency services supplying the necessities of the population are working and volunteers are running a few trains, trams and buses. Beyond scarcely a wheel is turning throughout the country.

The first approach to violence came this morning at the East and West India docks when large bodies of men forced their vehicles to turn back and overturned lighter ones and all work ceased at the docks.

During the late morning the railways were endeavoring to secure volunteers and it is expected an emergency service will be in operation before night.

Street traffic in London was in a hopeless jam at noon, making almost any kind of utility service almost impossible.

Reports from outside of London are meagre. Edinburgh reported volunteer crews operating a skeleton tram and bus service and two evening papers publishing. At Manchester, with the exception of food trains, all the service is tied up. At Hull the tie-up is complete. In Glasgow and the Clydeside the workers quit en masse with the exception of the shipyards.

In the Welsh mining districts hundreds of miners marched through the streets singing the "Red Flag."

The financial district of London was badly disarranged by the non-arrival of workers and there was talk of closing the exchange if the strike continues.

Earlier Reports

LONDON, May 4.—Cessation of railroad and street car traffic and the curtailment of the output of the two daily newspapers, Daily Mail and Daily Mirror were the only effects observable in London early this morning as a consequence of the declaration by the Trades Union Congress of the general strike. Full details of the movement will be available only when reports from outlying regions have been received.

AIR SERVICE IN COMMONS

Matter of Abandonment of Patrol on This Coast will be Investigated

VICTORIA, May 4.—A strike of fishermen coupled with a shortage of salmon completely tied up the salmon industry at the mouth of the Columbia River on the opening of the 1926 salmon fishing season yesterday. The fishermen's union contended for a price of fourteen cents a pound against the offer of the packers of thirteen cents. A strike was called which affected thousands of men.

After W. G. McQuarrie, Conservative member for New Westminster, had read a newspaper despatch voicing objections to the abandonment of the air patrol, the minister of marine and fisheries, Hon. P. J. Arthur Gardiner, assured the House that the situation would be fully investigated immediately.

G. G. MacKay, district engineer for the provincial department of public works, returned by yesterday afternoon's train from a trip to the interior on departmental duties.

Passed Counterfeit Notes at Three Victoria Banks but Was Checked Up at Fourth and Ran

Building Strike in Vancouver Spreads to All Workers Who Are Engaged in Construction There

VANCOUVER, May 4.—The deadlock between the building trades union and the contractors' association over the five day week issue is unbroken and the last word in the dispute was to the effect that there would be a fight to a finish.

Following the lockout of the men who refused to sign an agreement to work 44 hours on all big construction jobs yesterday morning, a general call was made to all members of the building trades union with the result that nearly all the steel workers, plasterers, painters, sheet metal workers, electricians, engineers, employed on the principal jobs in the city laid down their tools.

The contractors held a meeting and planned to counteract the effects of the strike. Discussion occurred over the possibility of bringing in outside building mechanics but no action will be taken until all efforts to arrive at a satisfactory settlement with the local unions have failed.

Views of Men

The views of the men as set forth in the Labor Statesman is as follows:

"And its quite in line with the progress that must be made in human affairs. All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy and this continuous grind must get a let-up once in a while. Job hunting is worse than working so no employer can attempt to satisfy the leisure-needs of the worker by laying him off. The wage earner wants proper time to enjoy with his family the bounties and beauties of nature. He desires to get away from the turmoil of construction, and the hurly-burly rampage in the city; he wants to enjoy the green meadows, the laughing brooks, the cool groves, the sandy beaches and the golden-topped mountains.

"If life cannot be more than a continuous drudgery, or outlook of despair, then we can look forward to a revolution that will one day hurtle the existing institutions to the high heavens. The Five-day week will not cripple industry; it will not retard building; it will not in any way block the wheels of progress. It will, if anything, help business, but above all things, and what is most important, it will enable the worker to get an opportunity to study art and science and literature and philosophy, and music, and to travel more, have more leisure, and a greater abundance of the good and beautiful things of this world."

In a report of a meeting of the contractors the following was published:

"The majority of the speakers declared themselves as opposed to cutting even the half day off the present working week as it would be bad for the contractors working on a time limit and not in any way beneficial for the building industry generally or for the community. It was pointed out that if the carpenters got a five-day week other trades would soon want it, too, and building generally would take about one-sixth longer to erect when under modern construction methods reduction of the actual time of erection was being constantly striven for."
