When you see an elderly man eating his dinner with the relish and enjoyment of a school boy, watch him help himself to Mustard. If it is not on the table, he will very quickly ask for it.

KISSING IS TABOO

ARKANSAS UNIVERSITY

Microbes Given off by Both Boys and Girls Develop into Bacteria on Slice of Potato

LAYETTEVILLE, Ark., May 7. Kisses, powder puffs and the tips of lead pencils are taboo with students of botany at the University of Arkansas.

Two slices of an ordinary Irish potato and a dish of gelatin are responsible.

As a laboratory experiment one of the students—a boy—was asked to kiss a slice of potato. This potato was then interned under an airtight glass dish. Several days later the students examined it. Four different kinds of molds were found. They were described as the kinds of mold found on jellies and old shoes, and there were several colonies of red, yellow, white and purple bacteria.

The instructor explained that the "penicillium" spore in the kiss had played havoc with the potato.

Then a powder puff was borrowed from one of the coeds. It was dusted on another slice of potato. Six kinds of mold as well as numerous bacteria appeared on the potato a few days later.

A pencil point was touched to a piece of gelatin. Two kinds of mold developed.

The students remarked at the floral appearance of the results of the experiment as seen through a microscope.

MEN WORST DRESSED

ANIMALS ON EARTH

German Professor Advocated Less Clothing and Necks Bare Like Women's

Women today are hygienically and artistically dressed, while men are the worst dressed animals on earth, according to Ernest Freidberger, Professor of Hygiene at the University of Greifswald. The present fashion of women's clothing bares the throat, allows of free circulation of air, and relieves the body from pressure; therefore a number of illnesses to which women previously were inclined have practically disappeared. Men are continually overdressed, and their skin is deprived of the air it requires. A dog, for instance, even in winter, carries less than 2 per cent of its weight as hair; men sometimes wear clothing amounting to a tenth of their weight. Men's fashions, says the professor, are set in London; they are sometimes attractive but are intended for a climate severer than is found in most parts of Europe and America.

Professor Freidberger proposes that men wear light tropical suits, short trousers or knickerbockers, if possible bare legs and arms, and do without a collar and tie, which are, in his opinion, antiquated and unhealthful. Such clothing should be worn, in all but the coldest weather. It would seem that the Professor has been influenced in his choice by the costume of the Bavarian and Tyrolean mountaineers or the youthful Wander-vogel who, garbed approximately as he describes, wanders in large numbers through Germany and certainly present all the appearances of robust health.

NOT MAKING TIME

The fog was thick and the short-sighted man could not see a yard ahead when he left the office. But he knew every inch of the way to the tram terminus—or thought he did. Ah! at last. He clambered aboard and took his place in the far corner. Time passed, but the tram showed no sign of moving. More time passed. The man grew impatient, and at last rose and addressed a misty figure: "What time do you think this tram will start?" he demanded. "Tram!" came the answer. "This ain't a tram. You're in a cabman's shelter!"
